Willits Creek Trail

To the Editor:

I read in the paper a few weeks ago that the supervisors are revisiting a second access road to Brooktrails. I understand that this is a very complicated and expensive endeavor, but wanted to express my support. I have been stuck in town for several hours, separated from my children, while Sherwood Road was closed due to a tree that fell and knocked down power lines.

We've had a few recent fire scares, and I pictured the chaos of 5k residents trying to escape down Sherwood Road, not knowing or not able to use the locked, gated and unpaved emergency exits. Sherwood Road being blocked by some downed power lines or fire in such an emergency could be catastrophic.

On a lighter note, and the main reason for this letter, I'd like to lobby for another Brooktrails access issue that is far less complicated and expensive. It is the need for a non-motorized path between Brooktrails and Willits. There are many people that live in Brooktrails that don't have a car. There are many more people that would love to walk or ride a bicycle to town, given the option.

I am one of those residents that would love to be able to commute to work by bicycle or ride with my kids to and from school. The benefits of exercise and lower carbon emissions are well-known. I have walked and ridden a bicycle down Sherwood Road, and it is terrifying. Because of the risk, I am forced to drive. Many people don't have that option and forgo safety to make it to work.

Willits residents being able to access the public open space of the Brooktrails Greenbelt is another benefit that this trail would create. Willits has very little open space for public outdoor recreation. The Willits Creek Trail would connect Willits to the 20+ mile public trail system and 2,500 acres of public, recreationally zoned greenbelt.

There is already an existing trail that follows the Willits Creek from the Par Course in Brooktrails down to the Northbrook neighborhood in Willits. It currently serves as an emergency access road. It was open and utilized for non-motorized travel for years. Unfortunately, it travels through three private parcels and two of those landowners put up fences years ago, closing off access.

It is a mellow grade that's easy to travel. Opening up a discussion with the landowners, coming to a mutual agreement that would benefit the property owners and the entire community, and creating easements all seems very attainable. It might require small land purchases. It may require a fence and a few gates. It is doable, and would drastically improve the lives of many Mendocino County residents.

I am the chairman of the Brooktrails Greenbelt and Recreation Advisory Committee, and the president of the Willits Area Cyclists. I can speak to their full support and willingness to help create a non-motorized Brooktrails-Willits connection.

Walk & Bike Mendocino and the Brooktrails Township Board of Directors have also pledged their support. There are many members of the community that would lend a hand as well. With the support and assistance of the Mendocino County supervisors, we could make it happen.

Staggered by raises

To the Editor:

Dear Mendocino County Board of Supervisors: I was staggered by the article in the December 21, 2017 edition of Willits Weekly regarding the Mendocino County supervisors voting yourselves a 39.7 percent salary increase. Your rationale was to get your salaries closer to those of supervisors in six "comparable" counties: Humboldt (population = 134,623), Lake (64,665), Napa (136,484), Nevada (98,764), Sonoma (483,878) and Yolo (200,849).

First, Mendocino County has a population of 87,841 – smaller than any of the above counties except Lake. So I'm not sure these counties are all "comparable." Second, it would help to see the other supervisors' salaries by county. In my opinion, our supervisors should not receive salaries "comparable" to those in larger, more economically healthy counties like Sonoma, Yolo or Napa. That would be like the owner of a local store thinking he should have a salary comparable to the president of Amazon because they're both retailers – a ridiculous premise.

Did Mendocino County's population increase by 39.7 percent? Have our county revenues increased by 39.7 percent? Has your workload increased by 39.7 percent?

The Wall Street Journal reported recently that the average public employee in the U.S. earns over 50 percent more than the average private employee. When pensions and benefits are added in, the average public employee earns over 67 percent more than the average private employee in the U.S. Many citizens are appalled by this disparity.

The only exception to this arrogance and cluelessness here in Mendocino County was Fourth District Supervisor Dan Gjerde. God bless him for voting against this outrage, although unfortunately he's not the supervisor for Willits. The increases for the Assessor/Clerk/Recorder (+11 percent); Auditor (+15 percent); District Attorney (+5 percent); Sheriff (+16 percent) and Treasurer/Tax Collector (+23 percent) were all less – although still not necessarily reasonable.

This total salary episode epitomized out-of-control government spending combined with a total lack of conscience regarding your constituents. The truly courageous and righteous thing for you as Mendocino County supervisors would be to retract your obscene salary increase or put it on the ballot rather than passing it during the holidays, when most voters were otherwise occupied.

Please, Mendocino supervisors, act for the benefit of your constituents and not yourselves. Rescind your salary increase or put it on the ballot ASAP! Remember: "Legitimate government is based on the consent of the governed."

Larry Stropes, Willits

County workers need a raise

To the Editor:

I'm appalled that the Mendocino County Board of Supervisors propose to give themselves a 39.7 percent pay increase (and 5 to 22 percent raises to five other county elected officials), while the majority of county workers still have not recouped the 10 percent pay cut they sustained in 2011.

The result is the county suffers. We can't keep sheriff deputies who train in Mendocino County. They soon go elsewhere to work for sustainable wages, leaving the department with staff shortages and skyrocketing work injuries due to mandatory overtime. The Department of Health and Human Services has been cited by the grand jury for not being able to staff their departments adequately, leaving citizens with untimely waits for services. The county can't attract enough skilled people who will work for the wages we offer.

The board of supervisors deserve salaries that are comparable to neighboring counties, but other county workers do too!

If you agree, call or email the board at 463-4221 or bos@co.mendocino.ca.us.

Cyndee Logan to run for 3rd District supervisor

Submitted by the Cyndee Logan for Supervisor campaign

Cyndee Logan, a long-time community activist and Willits resident, announced this week that she is running for District Three Supervisor of Mendocino County.

While her goal is to acquire the vacant seat in 2019, Logan's campaign is an invitation for citizens in Willits, Laytonville and Covelo to stand with her and bring about a community where everyone's voice is heard.

"I see the need to bring our community together as we look toward the future. We are going to have to work together more than ever; the good part of this is that we have so many amazing, creative and passionate people to work with," Logan, 59, said. "District Three needs to step up their representation; we need to pull our people together so we can be heard. Once we have our voice, we can bring this forward to the county level."

Once elected, she plans to organize a summit that would bring community members from all facets of life to the table – from different industries and groups. Entitled "Vision 2020," the objective is to identify common goals for the county which could be later developed into policy.

It would be the first such summit that would include the new legal cannabis industry as they coordinate alongside existing businesses to

Browe and Carpenter

Art Center showcases two masterful artists in January

Two artists, both masters of their craft, talented and driven to create, are featured at the Willits Center for the Arts this month. Both integrate nature into their compositions, but that is where the similarity ends.

Doug Browe, ceramist and teacher, communicator and visionary, begins with a message, a view of the world that he wishes to pass on to the viewer. He creates landscapes comprised of abstract human figures. His four compositions, taken individually, create a tableau of natural raw beauty; however, taken together, they create a narrative about global warming, politics, the future and rebirth.

The individual elements create themselves in the process as he attempts to create a coherent study on the way man affects his environment. If one asks him to explain his work, he welcomes the opportunity to form an exchange of ideas. As in his classes at Mendocino College, he considers teaching a way to enrich his own knowledge through the interaction of other minds.

Darrell Carpenter, on the other hand, is more withdrawn about his work, allowing it to speak for itself. His exhibit is called "Looking in Two Directions" and is indeed a confluence of two disparate styles, mirroring different phases of his life. His work is driven by outside influences, the recent deaths of his partner and his parents.

His dynamic floral collages are dedicated to his mother and father who were devoted gardeners and members of the Ukiah Garden Club. His other pieces are constructions created of triangles and seemingly influenced by the circus in their patterns and colors. He hopes that "at some point that the two techniques will kind of merge. The plywood that I'm painting on is more organic, more leaf-shaped, plant-based looking. I'm trying to combine the two."

Carpenter enjoys working with the collages. He can work from 5 am to 7 am before going off to his day job in construction, come back and cut out and combine the shapes. His technique is to first roll out the paint on a hard counter. He then lays the paper down and draws on the backside, creating lines on the front where the pressure from drawing on the back pushes the paper into the paint.

"You don't get perfect lines. You get a lot of bleed out," explained Carpenter. When he returns home, he cuts the patterns out with large upholstery scissors (from his days in the upholstery business). "I paste something down and sort of have to make it work. I kind of commit to it and then have to go from there. They're loosely based on drawings but look nothing like the drawings I started with. The drawings are very simple but these are very layered and complex."

His constructions may look like tables and candlesticks, but they are not. They are designed to stand on their own as art to be appreciated for the compositions the artist intended.

"I'm a bit Merlin-like," said Browe, "living life backwards. Most people go to college, they get their master's, they teach, develop a body of work, and then when they retire, they make work. I had a studio making work for 35 years and then retired from that, got my master's, and started to teach."

"I really enjoy teaching," continued Browe. "For me, that's a big part of it, passing on my learning. I enjoy that interaction where I'm learning when I teach. The students learn. I learn. I think my favorite thing is when someone asks me a question that I don't know. That's exciting. Because then I can actually figure it out with them. We get to move forward."

Browe believes that nature is not only "out there," but that it exists within as well. He considers himself to be a "vessel maker," the vessel being analogous of the human body which he juxtaposes into a composition of natural landscapes. He is precise and directed, even creating the tables upon which the compositions are arranged.

Baechtel Grove Middle School Science Fair
145 student projects explore the scientific method

"I love middle schoolers. They're young enough where you can still get them excited, but they're mentally prepared enough, developed enough, that they can be challenged," explained Vanessa Haggett, science department chairperson and organizer of the Baechtel Grove Middle School Science Fair. Students at the school participated in over 145 projects, either as a group or individually, in the expo which was judged by volunteers and teachers last December 12 with viewings available on December 13.

This was less an exercise in proving a theory or making pretty displays than it was in teaching the basics of the scientific method, which has been developed over centuries of trial and error by scientists in the pursuit of truth about how the universe works.

The scientific method starts with a question. What do we want to know about how and why something works? It is followed by a hypothesis, where one posits their educated guess about the original question. In order to discover what is true, the hypothesis is followed up by experimentation, including a control, which is used to compare the results to the variables which are used in the experiments. After collecting the data from the results of the experiments, a conclusion can be formulated.

The projects that score highest at this level go on to the Willits Science Fair. From there, they go to the county science fair, then the state competition. "We usually have a couple projects go to state," said Haggett.

"I think that they get a better understanding of the scientific method," Haggett explained, "and they also get to explore something that interests them scientifically, instead of just Googling it. It gives them the ability to think critically. We have a new section this year: Technology. This is in addition to Life Science (medical or health), Physical Science and Earth Science."

"I'm impressed this year with the quality of the projects and the breadth of the ideas," continued Haggett.

Call for Willits Science Fair participants

The 2018 Willits Science Fair will be held on February 6, 7 and 8 at the Willits Community Center. All Willits students in grades 3 to 12 are welcome to participate. Whole-class science projects done by kindergarten to 12th-grade classrooms are also welcome.

Students who are interested in doing a science fair project for the 2018 Willits Science Fair must have an "intent to participate" form submitted by Read the rest of Science | Over on Page 9

Lawrence Wilson Palmer
March 11, 1947 - December 29, 2017

Larry: a seeker, a thinker, a joker, a dreamer. His journey began with a childhood in North Hollywood, followed by his graduation from San Diego State, his life in Malibu, travel in Afghanistan, and the cultivation of family and friends in Willits and Punta Mita, Mexico. He always made sure to surround himself with forests, the night sky, oceans, and loved ones around the campfire.

Larry worked as a math teacher, a plumber, and a business manager in Mexico. More importantly to him, he was a brother, an uncle, a father, a grandfather, and a husband. He built a couple of homes from the ground up; one to house his family, and one to house his sweet, semi-retired life in Mexico. More impressive than his houses were the six children that he built within his life. He was proud of his kids; his eyes always lit up when his children were around. One of his grandchildren once said, "When he laughed, it made me laugh." Larry successfully constructed happiness.

It is hard to imagine Larry without a camper van. Always practical, Larry could turn a small space into a dreamer's getaway. He and his wife Marcia spent countless hours, days, weeks in the van, on the road. Larry and Marcia. Marcia and Larry. They were two souls drawn together by a love that can not be put to pen. When Larry's heart stopped, Marcia's shattered. He loved Marcia through every moment of their 27 years together.

In the latter years, Mexico developed a place of permanence in Larry's heart with its relaxed culture, open souls, and white sand beneath his bare feet. He is loved by a large community in Punta Mita, Mexico who cherished him. It turns out, Larry's boisterous belly laugh, warm smile, big hugs, and tender soul was bilingual.

In the end, Larry's heart was just too big for this world. After seventy good years, Larry left this planet. Ram Dass said, "We are all just walking each other home," and Larry will be welcomed in spirit by his parents Harlan and Rosemary Palmer. On Earth, he will continue to be celebrated by his devoted wife Marcia, his six children, five grandchildren, and three siblings and many nieces and nephews.

Larry often said he was more interested in becoming a human "being" than a human "doing." Come "be" with Larry and his family as we gather to memorialize Larry's life on Saturday, Jan. 20th at the Willits Center for the Arts from 3:30-5:30pm. We hope you will join us to share your loving memories of our dear father, beloved husband, and great friend ... Larry.

COLUMN | At the Movies

‘The Greatest Showman’

Daniel Essman
Columnist

Hugh Jackman (who has long experience as a song-and-dance man on stage) plays Barnum. This flick follows Barnum as a hungry, struggling poor boy to his successes as an impresario and huckster of curiosities. Also, we meet Charity Barnum (embodied by radiant Michele Williams), his wife from the upper classes who stands by Barnum through his failures and triumphs. Not to give anything away, but the movie has a happy ending ... and elephants.

My Thoughts: I loved the movie. I loved the production with its pretty, even hummable pop song score, and some truly spectacular circus-inspired choreography. Including a love scene/dance between beautiful Zendaya (omg!) and pretty Zac Efron which takes place mostly off the ground. (Please forgive the spoiler, I got carried away.) I’m sure this isn’t strictly historical, but it’s close enough ... and besides, I didn’t care.

Parents: Singing, dancing, a happy ending, and spectacle. I’d have liked it when I was a kid. (Spoiler warning:) There is a short-term threat to the happy marriage of P.T. and Charity which some younger children might find disturbing.

Special Shout Out: The performance of magnetic Rebecca Ferguson, who plays Jenny “The Swedish Song Bird” Lind, is subtle and brilliant. Willitsian Daniel Essman prefers his reality attenuated by the wisdom of the imagination.

The four works he has brought to this show work together to create a cyclical view of nature, beauty, destruction of the environment, and the new life that is born from and fed by the ashes. His work is deeply political and represents his concern over the current congressional and administrative climate which he believes is in conflict with the natural world. His exhibit is called "Continues."

For Carpenter, the art is the end to be appreciated for the beauty it is. For Browe the art is a beginning to bring the viewer into his world, to foment a discussion of that world and, through the art, create a positive change.

The Art Center's January show will run until Sunday, January 28. The Willits Center for the Arts, 71 East Commercial Street, is open Wednesday through Sunday, 11 am to 5 pm. More info: www.willitscenterforthearts.org or call 459-1726.

The rest of Dance | From Page 8

Dancing Club for children four years ago through the after-school program, which is still going strong on Mondays. Many of those students went on to attend the Willits Charter School and wanted to continue with the dancing. "Then let's start another club at the Charter School!" Wolf said.

It was wonderful for Willow Daun-Widner, who is now in sixth grade at the Willits Charter School and started dancing with the after-school program last year. "Last year I saw a performance [of folk dance], and it looked really fun so I joined the club. This year I'm taking the class off-campus and getting physical education credits for high school," she said. She's in the Thursday night group with her mother, Rebecca Daun-Widner, and also attends the teen group on Wednesdays.

"Megan and Jordan are very knowledgeable, personable and approachable," Rebecca Daun-Widner said. "That makes it easy for me to be there and easily learn the dances." The steps the group learns "aren't super technical," she continued. "There's no pressure to be perfect. It's about enjoying ourselves and being together in communal dance."

"They're good teachers and that makes a huge difference," said Madge Strong, a long-time folk dancer and teacher. "It's a great addition to activities in the community."

Also in the group, and a regular, is Divora Stern. "I'm doing this for brain health," she said. "Because of the crossing over in the left and right hemispheres of the brain in this type of dance, you're helping to strengthen the corpus callosum." The corpus callosum is the part of the brain that communicates between the left and right hemispheres.

Dancer Doris Wier simply exclaimed, "I love it!"

The first hour of each week's two-hour session is instruction for new dances, and the second hour is dancing favorite dances already learned. The class meets Thursday evenings from 7 to 9 pm at the Willits Charter School, 1431 South Main Street. No experience necessary, and no partner needed. $5 per class. “Last year we had about 10 projects on bottle flipping. We utilize the Science Buddies website which has project suggestions. It gives them guidance. They take those ideas and take it another step or two. We don’t assign them projects.”

Some notable entries this year include: “Does a Barrier Between a Nail and a Solenoid Have an Effect on the Strength of an Electromagnet?” by Nakolo Anderson Joens-Poulton, “Buoyancy Test” by Jerrin Schrade, which questioned what would happen if you were stranded in the Pacific Northwest: What kind of wood would make the best raft? Redwood, if you’re curious. “Magnet Powers” by Michael Kale, which asked if placing magnets would affect the regeneration of planeria. “Battle of the Sexes” by Kylie Rose and Nevaeh Loya, tested how men and women would do on a memory test and how they follow directions. Some other titles included: “Does a gas powered or an electric powered leaf blower make a hovercraft hover?” “Teen Stress, what stresses out female student more, social life or school?” There were several projects based on slime, how to make it and which products work best, a project on “Cats and Purring,” and one on “What brand of gum makes the biggest bubble and why?”

The judging was performed by volunteers Saprina Rodriguez, Suzanne Matheson, April Lamprich, Fred Branson and Eryn Schon-Brunner. “It was based on a judging sheet that is put out by the Mendocino County Office of Education,” said Haggett. “It’s things like, Do they have a question? Is their hypothesis clearly stated with reasoning? Is their procedure clear? Does their conclusion make sense? Do they have graphs? Do they include original drawings or models of their experiments? Do they have a notebook to record their data? Correct spelling and grammar?”

Haggett is attempting to teach students that the scientific method is a vital tool in the discovery of the truth of how the universe works and how to utilize those facts. Rather than just providing answers, the scientific method enables students to think critically and find their own solution, which is a method that can be adapted to all aspects of life.

Healing through Art

‘Avenues to Wellness’ speaker Susan Sweet uses art as therapy after trauma

Cancer, chronic pain, chronic illness, car accident, surgery ... trauma happens. Hopefully not to you, but, maybe....

With life and body shattered and disrupted, how to embark on the healing process is neither easy nor obvious.

Healing after trauma, aided by art, was the subject of an “Avenues to Wellness” speaker series presentation on December 5 by Susan Sweet, artist, licensed marriage family therapist, and registered art therapist.

A cancer survivor herself, Sweet said she has “been doing art” her whole life. “It’s always been a refuge,” she said.

In 1997, she “discovered art therapy” and said to herself, “Wow, this is what I want to do.”

When trauma, that overwhelming event that changes your life, happens, “people leave their bodies – and rightly so; it’s a great mechanism,” said Sweet. Afterward, “depression, anxiety, sleeplessness, and lack of appetite are normal.”

“The body remembers,” she said. “Trauma is stored in the body – in the right brain with other unconscious material. The whole nervous system is affected.”

Enter art. Art therapy is “emotionally energizing and restorative. It frees people up and activates emotions,” said Sweet. It “activates the right brain, gets things moving, bypasses the chatter, helps you unscramble, soothes the whole organism – you can feel the difference in your body doing the work.”

Sweet believes that “images that come up are messages from our souls that want to be looked at – and can be looked at objectively through art.”

Emphasizing that it is important to “tread lightly after trauma,” Sweet begins therapy by creating a safe place and letting people know that “there is no wrong way to do it. The process is about expressing self – finding out what’s in your heart and expressing it.”

The medium used is important. Sweet believes in “using good materials” because “we’re sensory beings and respond to materials.”

At left: Therapist Susan Sweet gave a talk about the healing powers of art for trauma victims. Below: A collaborative effort, this silk painting is on display at Adventist Health Ukiah’s Cancer Treatment and Infusion Center.

The use of tight materials (think pencils, markers), medium materials (pastels), and looser materials (paint) all have different effects on our emotional substrata.

“Water is deeply relaxing. Molding clay goes deeper into unconscious material. It can be powerfully regressive and calming,” said Sweet.

She starts the work sometimes with bilateral scribbling, or using both hands to draw. “The movement activates the right brain, the unconscious material, [and] you drop into art.” Collage is another tool. “Creating a collage while imagining a calm place is a powerful way to self-soothe,” she said.

“We go in any direction anyone needs. The healing process is calling yourself back in,” she said.

Noting that people “tend to isolate” when dealing with traumatic illnesses like cancer, Sweet extolled the benefits of working in a group with people who are facing or have faced similar life-altering challenges, sometimes doing collaborative art or working in pairs.

She currently leads two weekly groups in Ukiah where the only requirement for participation is to have, or have had, cancer. The groups are free, with a sliding scale fee for materials.

“Studies support the finding that art therapy helps the whole body to integrate and heal,” she said. “Art therapists have known this for a long time.”

Sweet can be contacted by calling 707-671-5122. Or, to learn more by yourself, she recommends the book “Managing Traumatic Stress Through Art: Drawing from the Center,” by Barry M. Cohen, Mary-Michola Barnes, and Anita B. Rankin.

Visit the Avenues to Wellness website at <https://www.avenuestowellness.org> to learn more about upcoming talks, including “Prescription Drug Abuse: A National & Local Epidemic,” set for Tuesday, January 9 at 5:30 pm.

identify and work together on potential solutions for the myriad of issues facing our region.

“We are at a really critical time,” she said. “We need to rethink what we do because if we keep doing what we’ve always done we will keep getting the same results. Our small businesses have been hit hard by the Willits bypass, economic downturns, and declining jobs. The county needs to look for new opportunities.”

Logan, who is currently the housing director for the Cahto Tribe in Laytonville, will focus on issues that make sense for the people of Mendocino County and their desires such as: reinvigorating the county’s housing, Mendocino’s environmental treasures, economic development, and public health and well-being. Ultimately, it’s all about a better Mendocino County for everyone – from the young people to the lifetime residents.

“I want to build a community where we can all stand together. Not only for today but for tomorrow. Stand with me for District Three.”

Logan’s other experience includes: 30+ years as a real estate broker, past board member of NCO, Nor Cal Idea group Sacramento, Willits Center for the Arts, Leadership Mendocino steering committee, Mendocino County Youth Council, board administrator for the Ukiah Natural Foods Co-Op, Clearlake planning commissioner, appointee on the MCOG TAC, Mendocino County Food Policy Council, and a facilitator, mediator and business development consultant.

were taken to jail and booked.

In an article published in the Santa Rose Press Democrat on December 26, Jake Slatas, a spokesman for the Ukiah office of the California Highway Patrol, is quoted as saying the bust was justified because the cannabis product was being moved prior to January 1, 2018, when the state’s cannabis program became operational.

According to Johnson – and several members of the public who spoke during the public comment portion of the board meeting, and to Old Kai attorney Joe Rogoway – the traffic stop was made by the California Highway Patrol. Later, members of the Mendocino County Major Crimes Task Force and the Mendocino County Sheriff’s Office came on the scene to assist.

The issue was discussed during the public comment portion of the board of supervisors’ January 2 meeting. Thirteen people addressed the board on the issue.

Rogoway told supervisors there was more at stake than just the survival of Old Kai as a company. “The issue here is not just relevant to Old Kai. And, of course, there has been a grave injustice that has been perpetrated upon them – not just the citation of the driver and the passenger, for unlawful transportation and possession for sale, which is the exact category of activities that are licensed by you, the County of Mendocino: licensed by the county, stopped by law enforcement, arrested, incarcerated potentially, based on the charges of transportation and possession for sale – but also this has a bearing potentially on any operator here in the county, who wants to comply with your ordinance, any operator that has listened to you, that has been present, that has participated, that has come out of the shadows, not just to express their support for the industry, but to put themselves at risk, to put their families at risk, their livelihoods at risk. And it is the sleep, is not earthquake safe, and has Americans with Disability Act issues.

Voters in the November 6, 2018 election will be asked: “Shall the Little Lake Fire Protection District, by ordinance, create a Special Tax not to exceed $20.00 per unit to be used to construct a new replacement fire station at 74 East Commercial Street, Willits, CA, capable of housing all apparatus, providing improved operating spaces and quarters in order to safeguard lives and property in the community, and shall said special tax sunset upon payoff of construction costs and be removed from future tax bills.”

A two-thirds “yes” vote will be required to pass the special tax. The district tried to pass a similar measure in November 2013, Measure I, but failed to win the required two-thirds approval, with 60.77 percent of voters voting “yes.” Only 1,573 votes were cast in the 2013 contest for Measure I; countywide, the voter turnout was only 24.99 percent.

An updated estimate for construction costs for the new firehouse is between $3.5 and $3.7 million. The special tax would be used to pay back a 40-year loan from the U.S. Department of Agriculture with a low 3.5 percent interest rate.

Local property owners would pay the $20 per unit tax based on the current tax calculations seen on their property tax bills: a single vacant parcel would 1 unit ($20); a single parcel with a residence would be 2 units ($40), a retail store would be 3 units ($60), commercial properties such as banks and professional offices would be 4 units ($80); commercial properties such as gas stations and shopping centers would be 5 units ($100); and a list of other commercial properties would pay between 6 and 10 units, depending on their classification.

The district will hold a second, and final, reading of the ordinance establishing the tax that will be up for voter approval, and a public hearing of the ordinance, at its February 13 meeting

Chief Wilkes also reported that Little Lake Fire received 555 calls for service in 2017, and 55 calls in December 2017 alone. He also said members of the strike team that had been assigned to fight the Thomas fire ending up coming home a couple days early, right before Christmas, and that Little Lake had been out on strike team duty 40 days last year.

livelihoods of farmers in Round Valley – whose products were seized – that are at issue here.”

Matthew Mandelker, co-founder and co-owner of Old Kai Logistics, said he believes the confiscated products has been destroyed. “It is our understanding that the product has been destroyed. It’s unfathomable in 2018 that we’re dealing with this,” he said.

Mandelker’s fears were shared by Joshua Artman, a Round Valley cannabis grower whose product made up most of the seized 1,825-pound cannabinoid cargo. “I don’t know what to tell my family. I mean, we believed in you. We believed these regulations would be meaningful, would amount to something, and that signing up for them would mean there would be smart law enforcement.

“What amazes me really about this whole process is, I’ve been completely in the dark. No one can tell me anything,” Artman said. “There’s no transparency. There’s no preservation letter. We don’t even know where the product is, or if it still exists.”

Several members of the public urged supervisors to take action in the case. Board Chairman Dan Hamburg suggested supervisors were sympathetic with Old Kai, but explained the item was not on the board’s January 2 agenda, and therefore supervisors could not legally take any action on the issue on that day.

“I think the board realizes this is a very serious situation that needs to be addressed,” Hamburg said. “It’s not on our agenda today, so we’re not able to address it fully. But it’s not something [we] are unaware of, or anything that any of us don’t think deserves our attention.”

The Old Kai item was not on the agenda of this week’s January 9 supervisors meeting.

Delaquadra has a long history of conflicts with north county landlords and benefactors who allowed her horses to graze on their property, said Angie Herman, secretary of Sonoma Action for Equine Rescue, “a group of concerned individuals who love horses and feel committed to promoting a more responsible and humane relationship between humans and the domestic equine,” according to the SAFER website.

“We’ve received a number of calls [concerning Delaquadra’s treatment of her horses] over the past four or five years,” Herman said.

Delaquadra originally pastured her horses in the Laytonville area, Herman said, but “quite often got evicted.” SAFER and animal control often received calls from area residents complaining of the condition of the animals, that the horses “were thin and not properly developed.”

After “burning all her bridges in Laytonville,” Herman said, Delaquadra moved the horses to Willits’ pastures, where complaints began to accumulate over the past year.

On May 31, 2017, the horses, which had been living on an East Hill Road property, were rounded up by Delaquadra and moved. Witnesses reported seeing vehicles from the Mendocino County Sheriff’s Office at the property later in the day, and a brown foal – which had broken its leg – was euthanized by an area veterinarian.

Capt. Greg Van Patten of the Mendocino County Sheriff’s Office and George Hodgson, senior animal control officer for Mendocino County, said a deputy sheriff visited the site, but found no evidence of criminal negligence in the death of the animal.

At the time, Hodgson told Willits Weekly he could only enforce what the law requires. “The law requires you to provide food and water for your horses, and get treatment if it’s injured. Barring any of those things happening, I can’t seize someone’s animals.”

However, he confirmed there was an ongoing investigation of alleged problems with Delaquadra’s horses.

Caudillo said deputies and animal control officers discovered a dozen horses (nine mares, a stallion, and two juvenile animals) at the Reeves Canyon Road property. All the horses were malnourished, emaciated and dehydrated “to some extent.”

One of the horses was discovered “unresponsive on the ground” and suffering from both malnutrition and severe dehydration.

A veterinarian was summoned and treated the animal, which “is on the way to recovery,” Caudillo said. “We have hopes for it.”

The animals were seized and removed from the site, and Delaquadra was arrested. As she was being taken into custody, Caudillo said, the woman became enraged and began resisting arrest, kicking a sheriff’s sergeant in the leg.

Delaquadra was booked into county jail on suspicion of animal cruelty (a felony), obstructing or delaying an officer and battery against a police officer. She was released later the same day.

On Saturday, Herman said, Delaquadra showed up at a Redwood Valley barn where SAFER had been providing free hay and supplies to county horse owners affected by October wildfires.

“Every time [SAFER President Kate Sullivan] would attempt to leave [the site],” Herman said, Delaquadra “would follow her,” apparently in the belief SAFER had custody of her horses.

On Tuesday, a superior court judge granted Sullivan a temporary restraining order to prevent Delaquadra from “harassing SAFER volunteers.

Delaquadra’s case is “under review by the Mendocino County District Attorney’s Office,” DA spokesman Mike Geniella said Monday. DA David Eyster is attending an out-of-county conference this week, so no action on the complaint is expected before sometime next week.

three pounds of bagged, processed marijuana, a digital scale, and concentrated marijuana.

She was booked into county jail on suspicion of cultivating more than six plants (a misdemeanor), and possession of marijuana for sale, but released without bond the following day.

At the time of the raid, Harris said she had a medical recommendation that allowed her to possess the plants. Investigators, however, argued Harris was growing “commercial” marijuana.

As part of the terms of her probation, Harris agreed to a search waiver, and agreed to pay restitution in full to the sheriff’s office for the cost of the raid and plant eradication, said District Attorney spokesman Mike Geniella.

Harris also agreed to not use marijuana recreationally, although she could continue to use cannabis subject to a valid doctor’s referral, although in no greater quantity than directed, Geniella said.

She was also sentenced to serve one day in county jail, but was given credit for the day she had already served.

Harris resigned from the WUSD board of trustees on December 6 after reading a prepared statement critical of both Superintendent of Schools Mark Westerburg and her colleagues on the board.

personally feel that $85,500 is logical, justifiable, and is proportionate to the salaries of other county employees within the organization, when you look at the responsibilities – I voted against it because, as we know, the typical county employee – not every county employee but the typical – is about 18 percent below their counterparts in comparable counties."

Gjerde added he had sent an email to county Human Resources staff, asking he be paid a salary that would be 18 percent below the $85,500 level, or $70,110.

The $85,000 figure is described as the "at-market" level, the average salary for supervisors from six counties that county staff judged to be comparable to Mendocino County in terms of population, demographics, and economy. The six comparable counties are Sonoma, Napa, Humboldt, Lake, Yolo and Nevada counties.

Gjerde will be accepting a salary increase of $8,910 a year, while the other supervisors will enjoy an annual increase of $24,300.

In voting to approve the first reading of the ordinance on January 2, Second District Supervisor John McCowen reminded the public that state law says supervisors have to set their own salaries. "The board of supervisors are in the unique position of being able to approve our own salaries. That is a function of state law," McCowen said. "There are a number of other things that are unique about the position.

"Any new county employee is hired at a particular pay, and that pay increases 5 percent a year for five years. That doesn't happen with the board of supervisors.

"We're free to work as many hours as we wish," McCowen added. "If we were to work a 40-hour week, it would be a significant reduction in the workload for each of us. A light work week is 50 or 60 hours. It's not that hard to work 80 hours.

"We all signed up for this job," he noted. "We ran for it; we campaigned for it. So, we're all here doing the job that we want to do, and it is uncomfortable to be setting your own pay. But, again, that is the way the law provides for it."

Fifth District Supervisor Dan Hamburg, who was elected board chairman at the beginning of the January 2 meeting, explained he hoped the higher salary would result in more candidates coming running for office. Hamburg referenced recent electoral trends in Mendocino County; he ran unopposed in 2014, Gjerde ran unopposed in 2016, and Brown faced only light opposition in the 2016 race from Montana Podva, an attorney and champion of the U.S. Constitution who was not well known in the First District. Brown won the 2016 election by a vote of 75.29 percent to Podva's 24.07 percent.

"I know we're all fabulous supervisors," Hamburg said. "But the fact that there's no one who's willing to come forward and compete for these jobs has something to do with the salary."

The ordinance also provides supervisors' salaries will be pegged to those of county department heads in the future. Whenever the departments heads get a pay hike, or take a cut, as a bargaining unit, supervisors' salaries will be affected in like manner.

Several people commented on the proposed salary hike, most of them speaking in opposition to the pay hike. Sherry Glaser, a performance artist employed by a cannabis dispensary in the village of Mendocino, asked on what grounds the raise could be justified. "On what merit, other than time? This is $2,000 a month, it brings your salary to $7,000 a month. All of us, who you've been representing, have had a pay cut because of your ineptitude, your inefficiency in passing ordinances and protections.

"I don't get a raise for failing," Glaser added. "So, I'm not sure why you are getting a raise and why you would vote yourself a raise. What have you done? What revenue have you brought to this county? What have you done to bring in revenue?"

Acting director of the county's Health and Human Services Agency, Anne Molgaard, encouraged the board to go forward with the raise. "Without a salary increase, we are narrowing our pool of candidates to people who can afford to run," she said. "And that is basically undemocratic."

Pinches ran again in 2006, this time turning the tables on Wagener, serving as Third District supervisor from 2007 to 2010, during difficult financial times for the county. In November 2010, he defeated Willits City Councilwoman Holly Madrigal and was elected to a third term, then retiring in 2014.

Pinches acknowledged health issues played a role in persuading him it was time to retire toward the end of his third term. "I guess it's no secret that I was pretty bad there for a while," said Pinches. "It was my heart. I had a heart operation, but I'm doing a lot better. I'm getting stronger every day."

In 2017, Pinches applied to the California Governor's Office to be appointed Third District supervisor in the wake of the January 2017 resignation of former Supervisor Tom Woodhouse due to health issues. Brown overlooked the 65-year-old Pinches in favor of Willits native, U.S. Air Force veteran and large animal veterinarian Georgeanne Croskey. In July 2017, Croskey announced she would not seek reelection in 2018.

"I don't like the way the county's going," Pinches said, when asked why he's seeking a fourth term, citing the closure of the county road yard in Laytonville, the failure of the Department of Transportation to take full advantage of the federal bridge program, and a policy decision by the board of supervisors and Director of Transportation Howard Dashiell not to hire outside contractors to take on county road jobs when there are not enough Department of Transportation employees to do the work.

"The county budget is just about $300 million now," Pinches said, "and there are five supervisorial districts. That means each district ought to be getting about $60 million worth of services. Show me where the Third District is getting $60 million worth of services."

Asked about his views on the county's attempt to regulate cannabis, Pinches said: "On marijuana, I've been saying for a long time that as far as marijuana goes, it all has to do with the money. And another thing I've been saying is, I don't know how folks around here can compete with people in the Sacramento Valley, who have practically unlimited land and free water. Basically I think we have to get some other things going around here."

Pinches said he has not yet filed to run, but will file before the February 7 deadline to file a notice of intent to submit signatures in lieu of paying the full filing fee. The deadline for filing to run in the Third District supervisor race is March 14.

So far, five Third District individuals have filed notices to submit signatures in lieu of paying the filing fee. They are Willits teacher and Willits Teachers Association President John Haschak, Willits community activist Cyndee Logan, Laytonville resident Pamela Elizondo, Round Valley school board member and emergency support staffer for Redwood Community Services Tony Tucker, and Little Lake Valley blacksmith Brian Kunka.

Sheriff's report

An explosive Christmas 'gift'

Sheriff's investigators are seeking the person who left a bomb in the driveway of a 41-year-old Willits man.

Deputies were called at about 10:15 am on December 18 after the intended victim noticed a "suspicious object" in the driveway of his home in the 4000 block of Bear Canyon Road the previous day, said sheriff's Sgt. Quincy Cromer. The man said he didn't know "how the object came to be there," but was worried it could be a bomb.

Deputies investigated, and "sent photographs of the device to deputies with the Humboldt County Sheriff's Office who are trained and certified to deal with suspected destructive/explosive devices," Cromer said.

Humboldt County deputies drove to Willits and "determined the object was a destructive device," he added. The deputies "were able to neutralize the device, which was subsequently secured as evidence for this investigation."

The motive and purpose of the device remain unknown. Anyone with possible information concerning the incident is urged to the call the Mendocino County Sheriff's Office Tip Line at 234-2100.

Petaluma man held for weapons, drugs

A 26-year-old Sonoma County man was arrested on weapons and drug charges following a December 23 physical altercation with a woman in the 44000 block of North Highway 101 in Laytonville.

While deputies were en route to the 4 pm disturbance, they learned the woman had left the location, but the male was still in the area.

A state traffic contacted a man fitting the suspect's description nearby at Branscomb Road and Highway 101, said sheriff's Sgt. Joseph DeMarco. The man was identified by his California driver's license as Martin Gerard Curran of Petaluma.

"The CHP officer detained Curran, who was found to be in possession of a loaded, concealed firearm and a concealed fixed-blade knife," DeMarco said. The officer also found a small bag of suspected methamphetamine on Curran's person.

Deputies took custody of Curran, and checked the area for the woman, "but she was not located and did not call law enforcement to make a report," DeMarco said.

The firearm was discovered to be "lost or stolen" in 2009 near Bakersfield.

Curran was arrested on suspicion of possessing a controlled substance while armed, possessing a concealed dirk or dagger, and possession of a controlled substance.

He was booked into Mendocino County Jail. Bail was set at $35,000.

Covelo woman attacks clerk, robs store

A Covelo woman was arrested on suspicion of first-degree robbery and assault with a deadly weapon following a December 28 rampage at Keith's Market in Covelo.

Deputies arrested Misty Lee Hawkins 35, after she allegedly took several food items and alcohol from the market in the 76000 block of Highway 16 at about 4:30 pm on December 28, according to sheriff's Sgt. Joseph DeMarco.

The 61-year-old male store employee told deputies that when he attempted to stop Hawkins after she left the store and retrieve the items she had taken, the woman struck him in the face with her hand.

She then let go of the shopping basket that contained the stolen food items, and the store employee grabbed the basket and went back inside of the store, DeMarco said. Hawkins followed the man back into the store, and when told she had to leave became angry and started screaming and yelling, DeMarco said. She then picked up a metal pipe and tried to strike the threw it at the man, who had to jump out of the way to keep from being hit.

Covelo Tribal Police detained Hawkins at the store, and deputies arrested her on suspicion of first-degree robbery, and assault with a deadly weapon other than a firearm.

Deputies also learned Hawkins had an outstanding misdemeanor warrant for her arrest out of the Mendocino County Superior Court for failing to appear in court on an unrelated case.

Hawkins was booked into the county jail. Bail was set at $82,500.

These reports were based on press releases from the Mendocino County Sheriff's Office.

Supes monitor progress on fire recovery, pot program

The Army Corps of Engineers has hired yet another contractor to perform debris removal services for Mendocino County fire victims. After only two or three weeks on the job, Ashbritt is leaving, and now the Army Corps has hired Minnesota-based Ceres Environmental Services instead. Ceres is the third contractor signed on to work with the Corps of Engineers since late November.

Despite setbacks associated with inadequate federal funding, with labor agreements running out of money before the scheduled work was finished, with the Army Corps having difficulty finding the right contractor, county staff and Corps personnel offered a positive assessment to the board of supervisors.

According to Colonel Eric McFadden, recently installed as project manager for the four-county recovery effort from wildfires that ravaged Northern California in October, crews subcontracting with the Corps still have some 150 homesites to clean up in Mendocino County.

"We are 54 percent complete," McFadden said.

Mendocino County Deputy Executive Officer Steve Dunicliff told supervisors the Corps and FEMA are working together to install infrastructure that will allow the establishment of between 35 and 50 modular homes at campgrounds at Lake Mendocino. Work to establish the infrastructure will begin on January 16 and Dunicliff said he is hopeful the homes will be installed by February 1.

In the meantime, 14 families have been placed in 15 trailers which have been parked at the Redwood Empire Fairgrounds in Ukiah. Those families will be moved to Lake Mendocino as soon as the houses become livable there.

Pot program creates friction

Long simmering dissatisfaction at the county's cannabis cultivation program bubbled to the surface Tuesday, as supervisors sought clarity on when and how requested changes to the program could be finalized and implemented.

Changes ranged from the arcane to the more momentous. On the high end, McCowen is now ready to do away with the requirement that each different type of cultivation technique permitted by the ordinance will require a separate permit.

For example, as currently written, if a grower wanted to grow 2,000 square feet of outdoor, 5,000 square feet of indoor, and 3,000 square feet of indoor, mixed light styles of cultivation, that grower would need to get three permits.

On Tuesday, McCowen said he now supports a change that would allow growers to "mix and match" cultivation styles, so long as the total area under cultivation came in under the amount specified in the permit. Using that example, a grower who wanted to grow 2,000 square feet of outdoor cannabis, 5,000 square feet of indoor, and 3,000 square feet of indoor, mixed light cannabis, would be able to do so under one permit.

McCowen asked County Counsel Katherine Elliott if she thought that placing that change in the ordinance would require changing the measure. Elliott replied she did not know, but would find out.

McCowen also requested the ordinance be changed to clarify that if a grower is moving from one parcel in Forest Land or in the Timber Production Zone zoning district – and is keeping within the same total cultivation area as on a previous grow site – that person would only need a zoning clearance from Planning and Building staff, rather than an administrative permit.

McCowen also supported a change requested by Laytonville attorney Hannah Nelson, that the area standards for the various types of permits be amended to include mature plants only. Nelson said that is the way the area guidelines are calculated in state regulations.

Supervisors McCowen and Brown recently attended working group meetings concerning the proposed overlay zones. Both supervisors, in different ways, indicated they thought it was time to move the process forward.

"I think at the end of the meeting there was a consensus among those present that it made sense not to continue with the single working group on that topic, but to have three distinct working groups focused on three distinct topics: opt in, opt out, and exemptions," said McCowen.

"Part of the problem, obviously, is that there are people in there who are purely concerned with, how is this going to affect me?" he said.

McCowen advocated the single overlay zone working group be broken up into three working groups, focusing on either opt-in, opt-out and exceptions. Each mini-group would consist of between five and seven members. McCowen said each group should meet with the consultant once or twice so group members could present their ideas on what each group would like to see. Then the consultant would be charged with drafting suggested language for new ordinance subsections.

Brown, however, felt the process was bogged down. She called for one or two meetings between the consultant and the mini-working groups as advocated by McCowen, but said she wanted the consultant to quickly submit proposals to supervisors.

"I feel by February 1 that the consultant has got to be ready to write this," Brown said. "I'm tired of waiting."

McCowen shared Brown's sense of frustration. "Frankly, I don't get the sense that the consultant shares the sense of urgency of our community and our board."

County Chief Executive Officer Carmel Angelo reminded the board that the consultant, Michael Baker International, hired by the county in early October, has only been on board for a short time. Angelo said she thought it would likely take the consultant six months to draft new subsections to the ordinance.

"I believe this is a complex process," she said. Addressing the compressed timelines advocated by Brown and McCowen, Angelo said, "I don't think the consultant thought that was what he was signing up for."

Angelo agreed to ask the consultant to meet with supervisors at the board's January 23 meeting. A few moments after making that statement, Angelo confirmed representatives from the firm would be present on that date to talk with supervisors.

Boy Scouts hold post-holiday tree pick-up

Over 100 trees were picked up and chipped up by the members of Boy Scout Troop 212, Boy Scout Troop 42 and Cub Scout Pack 42 on (sunny!) Saturday, January 6. Action Rents of Ukiah donated the chipper, which was stationed at the Willits Cafe parking lot. Chips will be used at the sewer plant. Troop leader Ken Pederson noted his appreciation to Action Rents as well as to the boys and their families for helping make the event a success again this year.

Stunning Charlie

Charlie is a 2-year-old neutered male mixed-breed dog who currently weighs 67 pounds. This handsome dog is easy to leash up, and a bit tentative and nervous. During his meet and greet and evaluation, Charlie met our tester dog, and he perked right up. In the play yard during his photo shoot, Charlie took to our photographer, and nudged him with his nose – just a gentle reminder that he was there, and yes, please – some pets would be nice. Charlie is stunning, with his beautifully red coat, long legs and dropped tail.

The Ukiah Animal Shelter is located at 298 Plant Road in Ukiah. Adoption hours are Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 10 am to 4:30 pm, and Wednesday from 10 am to 6:30 pm. ## Kobe &amp; Becca

Kobe and Becca are a brother/sister pair who are always together. They came in a litter of four, though these two in particular have bonded as best friends. Though they can be separated, we would love for them to get a home together. Even though they are very bonded, they are always up for some human attention. What's better than a wonderful pair of tuxedo cats? Come meet them soon!
