Willits Food Bank update

To the Editor:

The food bank has successfully changed locations from the old spot on East San Francisco Street in Willits to the new at 344 Railroad Avenue. A few big and some small projects remain to be finished in order to complete the move. Our new location is wonderful and beautiful. Many thanks to Mike Griggs and family for making it possible.

Our recipient numbers remain high. We're serving four times the number of people that were being served during the pre-pandemic years, a huge increase. This increase requires more food and all of the support that goes with it, including workers and funds to keep the food bank running smoothly.

Please donate by bringing or mailing your check to 344 Railroad Avenue. Help us to keep feeding the hungry and providing winter motel nights to those without homes.

As my retirement approaches, the upcoming new director Kim Tippit is beginning to learn the job. We're teambuilding to ensure a smooth transition. Please stop in and meet her in mid-April. The office phone number remains 707-459-3333.

It has been my honor to serve and assist the needy population of the Willits area since 2019. I'm so grateful to have had such a team that made many successes possible.

Thanks to all who continue to donate and who share our vision of feeding hungry and food-insecure people in our community.

Your kindness and compassion are deeply appreciated.

Ruthanne Volz, executive director,

'A Love Letter to Willits'

To the Editor:

I came to her in 1972.

Long ago Joni Mitchell sang: "Don't it always seem to go, that you don't know what you've got 'til it's gone..." You only have to leave Willits, even for a short time, to realize it's part of the paradise that is northern California.

Part of that heavenly space is its people, and I met many before having to leave a couple of months ago after a fall at home.

During our lifetime we meet many different people for varied reasons. First, I worked as a teacher's aide at Brookside School. It tickles me to this day to say "hello" to Dale Barlow, a grown man now and clerk at Safeway. He was a second-grade student in that class. Schools provided my first set of friends.

In 1974 Brooktrails General Manager Ray Rockefeller stopped by our house to ask if I would consider coming to work for him at the water and sewer district. There I met not only staff but many of the customers in Brooktrails. Another set of friends.

In my retirement years I met a "crazy" lady. "Crazy" in the best sense of the word. Her name was Donna Stropes. She got me interested in silent auctions for Phoenix Hospice Garden Tours, Little Lake Fire Protection District, the Howard Foundation, and eventual construction of

Look for climate credits on your April PG&E bill

Submitted by PG&E

In April, more than 5 million Pacific Gas and Electric Company customers will automatically receive the California Climate Credit on their energy bill.

Residential households with an active electric account will automatically receive an electric credit of $55.17, an increase from last year's credit of $38.39. Residential households with an active gas account will automatically receive a credit of $85.46, an increase from the $52.78 credit in 2023. That is a total credit of $140.63 for customers receiving both gas and electric service from PG&E.

"This credit highlights our partnership with the state to champion environmental responsibility," said Vincent Davis, senior vice president, Customer Experience. "It encourages sustainable practices, moving our communities toward a brighter, greener future."

The California Climate Credit is part of the state's efforts to fight climate change and is distributed by PG&E to customers as directed by the California Public Utilities Commission. This credit is from the California Cap-and-Trade Program, which requires power plants, fuel providers, and large industrial facilities that emit greenhouse gases to buy carbon pollution allowances. The bill credit is designed to help utility customers during the transition to a low-carbon future.

Residential customers receive biannual electric credits during April and October, while natural gas customers receive an annual credit in April. Eligible small business customers receive identical electric credits, distributed twice a year. Both sets of customers will receive the second electric credit in October. PG&E will also distribute over $36 million to eligible industrial customers on behalf of the CPUC. Eligibility requirements and other details are online at <https://pge-eite.com/faq?>

In addition to the California Climate Credit, customers are encouraged to explore other ways to save energy, reduce costs on monthly bills, and contribute to building a sustainable future.

Farmers Convergence

Food growers and distributors of Mendocino and Lake counties discuss successful methods for producing and selling their crops

Food security is one of the top issues in much of the world. Mendocino County, although generally green and lush with vegetation, has its own set of challenges in the production of food. Ever-increasing droughts, over-burdening regulations, the dominance of corporate farming, and challenges of distribution are some of the factors facing the family-based farms in Mendocino and Lake counties.

It is for the above reasons that the ninth annual North Coast Farmers Convergence took place at Ridgewood Ranch in the Golden Rule Dining Hall and Chapel on Tuesday, March 19, lasting all day and encompassing all aspects of local farming.

About 100 of the area's farmers, distributors, and food-service personnel gathered to meet and greet and to learn techniques for growing in a sustainable manner from other farmers who have been successful in their efforts. It was in the sharing of knowledge that the community of agriculturists joined together to create a free flowing of ideas and suggestions. Although they are, on some level, competitors, the farmers knew that their overcoming of challenges relied on the group knowledge, a sharing of techniques and methodology. According to Michael Foley, co-owner of Green Uprising Farm and manager of Willits Farmers Market: "The purpose of this gathering is to inspire and inform local food producers and providers in Mendocino and Lake counties. We do this, mainly, through giving farmers an opportunity to speak about their own experiences and their own choices. The farmers always help each other. The farmers are the most cooperative among themselves. They check in with each other."

At the opening of the programs, one of the organizers of the event, Lucy Bartholomew of the Blue Zones Project and resident of Ridgewood Ranch, made reference to the Pomo ancestors who first inhabited and learned to live in a symbiotic relationship with the land: "I want to recognize all of the local producers who grew the food we are going to eat. Today's convergence takes place throughout the traditional territories and homelands of the Pomo people, whose history has been sullied by displacement, Holy Saturday, March 30, 10 am: A short service of prayers.

COLUMN | AT THE MOVIES

'Ghostbusters: Frozen Empire'

The Story: The latest offspring of the "Ghostbusters" franchise is built around familiar tropes: a mysterious object, an ancient evil, a demonic god with a funny name, in this case "Garraka." (It's a matter of traditional Hollywood wisdom that melodramatic bad guys have a "k" in their names.)

For reasons unknown or unfathomable, Garraka wants to destroy the world as we know it - with ice. So, there's Garraka (pronounce it like you're clearing your throat) who is powerful and evil. But are we worried? Not really. The ghostbusters are indomitable.

My Thoughts: When I hear the word ghostbusters, my automatic response is "Who ya' gonna call?" We all know it's not a question. It's programming. It's an invocation of the 1984 "Ghostbusters" masterpiece. It's a word that triggers a familiar-as-crackerjack upbeat musical intro, and is buoyant with nostalgia.

This flick gives us pretty much all the original cast members: Dan Aykroyd, Bill Murray, Annie Potts, Ernie Hudson and William Atherton. All of them have small though significant roles. For this flick, there are no surprises, and see the movie knowing that there are "no surprises." Still, a good time will be had by all. By the way, and not really a spoiler, the filmmaker admirably quotes Robert Frost's poem "Fire and Ice" at the beginning. Huzzahs! for that.

Parents: Ghostbuster movies are designed to strip ghosties and uglies of their power to terrify. That noted, little children might be scared. You know your own.

Willitsian Daniel Essman prefers his reality attenuated by the wisdom of the imagination.

Mendocino youth mountain-bike team competes in first race

Submitted by Crystal Schiffbauer-Bowles for NICA

The National Interscholastic Cycling Association supports youth mountain-biking programs across 31 states, serving over 25,000 student athletes and 14,000 coaches. The Mendocino Composite was started about 10 years ago on the coast. At the start of this season, with coordination between head coach Myke Berna and Adam Sherf, the team has grown and now includes an official Inland Team composed of students from Ukiah and Willits. Additional inland coaches include Adam Winokur, Chris Beebe, Crystal Schiffbauer-Bowles, and Steven James, for a group of 10 high school and middle school athletes.

On March 2, Mendo Comp participated in their first race of the season at the Fort Ord Day Camp Cycling Area. The day started with a consistent downpour that made for a muddy and difficult ride for the early high school races. As the day progressed, the rain stopped and the sun broke through the clouds, giving racers drier trails, allowing faster and more competitive riding.

The Inland Team high school athletes completed three 3.8-mile laps. Abigail Sherf had finished her race in sunshine, but the first 2.5 laps were rain soaked and mudslick, forcing her to navigate corners where several riders' bikes slid out from under them and crashes were narrowly missed, leading to race organizers putting up caution signs.

Although these racers didn't podium, they made impressive passes and rode aggressively throughout and came away knowing what they want to work on and how they want to race next. Of these four racers, this was the first-ever race for both Sherf and Rudra Knoles.

The Inland Team DEVO riders, middle-school-aged athletes who are developing skills for racing, includes sixth graders Aurora Beebe and Bronach Bowles, who participated in their first-ever race. They both placed, with Beebe taking third on the podium and Bowles, fifth. The racers took advantage of terrain, overtaking or pulling away from riders past key turns and on straightaways, never letting up. They both had fun and were excited to get rewarded for the hard work they put in over the competitive two 2.6-mile laps on what was primarily packed dune sand.

The next race will take place in Exchequer on April 6.

"We acknowledge and revere the heritage of generations of original inhabitants," said Bartholomew, "of what is now Ridgewood Ranch and their descendants' continued legacy. We strive for our work to sustain cultural resilience by seeking guidance from traditional practices and contemporary leaders. We recognize these ancestral grounds that we work, learn, and play upon and honor the strength of indigenous people.

"Mendocino County," Bartholomew continued, "has been supportive of microscale farming and growing food in living soil that has high nutritional value. This is one of the first counties to regulate pesticide usage. Now our local food system is one of the cleanest in the country. It's due to things like this, and the legacy of the 'back-to-the-land movement,' and the influence of locals who are passionate, and the continuing efforts that are demonstrated today.

After a tasty and healthy breakfast, the convergence began its program with talks by Bartholomew, Ruthie King, Foley, and Mendocino Food Hub head Haerah Baird, who introduced a panel of four local farmers: Caymin Ackerman of Big Mesa Farm, Krissy Scommegna of Boonville Barn

Although NICA started as a mountain-bike-racing program, the purpose has developed into a program for growing a community of mountain-biking enthusiasts by getting more kids on bikes, building strong minds, characters and bodies by overcoming challenges and having adventures with teammates.

NICA is designed to work alongside school extracurricular programs, so practices and races take place on the weekends. The Inland Team practices on Sundays, alternating between rides in Ukiah, Brooktrails and Wente in Willits, and on the coast, getting experience in different kinds of terrain and lots of climbing.

was declared deceased at the scene. Mathieson and Draughan's 2-year-old child was present and was transported to an out-of-county hospital for injuries unrelated to the shooting incident. Mendocino County Sheriff's Office detectives responded and took over the investigation. Criminalists from the California Department of Justice labs in both Eureka and Santa Rosa responded to assist in processing the crime scene for evidence. Draughan was subsequently transported and booked into the Mendocino County Jail on a charge of homicide.

Any persons with information related to this homicide are encouraged to contact the Mendocino County Sheriff's Office by calling Dispatch at 707-463-4086, or through the tip line at 707-234-2100.

Editor's Note: As of March 27, the Mendocino County Jail Booking Log reports that Draughan is being held on $1,000,000 bail.

In a March 21 report on the murder, the Redheaded Blackbelt news website https://kymkemp.com/ posted some details from a background check on Draughan, showing a 25-year history of arrests and domestic abuse.

"In November of last year," the report

Johnathan Lee Draughan, recently of Covelo.

"On December 20, 2023, the Mendocino County District Attorney's Office filed a motion for the case to be dismissed due to insufficient evidence. Due to the dismissal of the case, the criminal protective order was terminated.

"The deceased filed for a CPO on January 30, 2024. Draughan was served with notice of the filing on February 2. The CPO was to serve the notice to Draughan on February 28."

The Redheaded Blackbelt also reported that, according to the background check, Draughan has a history of arrests back to 1998 in North Carolina, and "at least 14 court cases between North Carolina and South Carolina." Draughan's record also includes 2022 arrests in Del Norte County for disorderly conduct under the influence of drugs and for violating a court order to prevent domestic violence.

Several CAL FIRE participants were on hand to speak with the students and offer them the ability to apply for the many opportunities available with the organization, primarily firefighter one, an entry-level position. In addition, they "have natural resource-based positions like forestry.

Andrea Heaney, store manager for Mendo Mill in Willits said: "I'm telling the kids about the Mendo Mills' history in the community. We've been around for 80 years, having started out as a local sawmill. I'm also teaching the students that the path that you choose right out of high school may not necessarily be the path that you end up on. Visit http://www.mendomill.com/jobs/ for more info.

"We're trying to get the kids psyched about careers in conservation," said Stephanie Garrabrant-Sierra, executive director of the Resource Conservation District of Mendocino County. "We're not looking for kids to work for us currently. We generally hire people with college educations. We're telling the students about the career and what kind of college degrees we are looking for when they do graduate from college, so they can plan their steps." Greer was the first-place winner (currently at 27.4%) in California's "top two" March primary. The top two primary sends the top two primary winners – no matter their political party – to the November general election.

In Mendocino County's closest election, the First District supervisor's race, the March 21 update shows incumbent Maureen Mulheren still in the lead with 51.82% (1,679 votes) and challenger Jacob Brown at 48.18% (1,561 votes).

After reporting that she expected to have the March primary election certified by the end of the week, "which is a good thing," she said, Voter Registrar Bartolomie welcomed any of the supervisors to visit her office and talk to her about any concerns about how elections are handled.

"We've put extra security measures in to make sure, of course, that the incorrect ballots did not get counted and the correct ballots did," she said, referring to the all-Republican test ballots a third party vendor incorrectly caused to be sent out to all county voters in early February.

"We've sorted those out," Bartolomie said. "We had about 450 ballots that had not been revoted with the replacement ballot, so we remade those to the proper precincts and the proper party, so those are taken care of. Those are being scanned in now, along with the provisional ballots – we had about 580 of those – which are being processed now, and that's like the end of our process," she said.

Provisional ballots are given, for example, to voters who show up at the polls without their mail-in ballot or who register to vote on Election Day.

Bartolomie said she had talked to the ballot vendor ("the printer") about what measures they – or any other future ballot vendor – should have in place "so this never happens again."

She reported the vendor had promised more quality control measures applied to steps after the Elections Office had approved proofs for all the different ballots to be printed.

Proofs were approved for this election, as usual, Bartolomie said, "but there was a step between, which was that the third-party vendor had to check the image to make sure the image and the ballot was going to print correctly, and what happened was [the employee] had sent the test ballot, rather than the regular ballot order, to them to be printed."

Supervisor John Haschak asked Bartolomie if the county had any control over vendor Integrated Voting Systems, or any other ballot vendor, as far as that vendor contracting out tasks to a third party.

"I didn't even know there was a third party," Bartolomie answered, "so that answer is 'I don't know.'" Haschak asked if she had confidence in Integrated Voting Systems themselves.

"Well, whether it's this vendor or it's another vendor," Bartolomie said, "I know that we will be asking for spot checks as well, so we can make sure that our product is going to be as correct as it was when it left our office."

Supervisor Haschak then asked about the 177 voters on the edge of supervisorial districts who received ballots for their old district, after the 2021 redistricting process.

"Is there notification that's given to people when they get redistricted?" he asked. "Yes we send out a postcard to everyone who's affected," Bartolomie answered, "so every 10 years if you're in an area that's getting redistricted, then you receive a postcard saying you're now in the Third District or Fourth or whatever."

Haschak asked what the voter office had done to take care of the ballot redistricting issue so it doesn't happen again.

"We called in Leif Farr, who is our GIS coordinator for the county, and he helped us make sure everything was correct and that we had everyone where they should be," Bartolomie said, "and then we also called in Sue Ranochak, who was our previous assessor, and we double-checked it together to make sure everything was fine."

"OK," Haschak said, "so you're feeling like the procedures that we have in place are appropriate?" "Yes," Bartolomie answered. "You know, we had a very short turnaround and that's no excuse for a mistake but it was a mistake and it happened, and we got the [corrected] ballots out within 48 hours," with a letter notifying voters of the problem, and a press release that went on social media and to the press alerting voters to the error.

Supervisor Ted Williams asked if the redistricting issue could have affected results of the 2022 election.

"We went back and looked at that," Bartolomie said. "Yes, there was the 140 ballots from the Hopland area ... but when we looked at that, you had won by such a landslide that 140 votes was not going to matter one way or the other, and John [Haschak] had won by such a landslide that the 40 votes that were up there were not going to matter."

When asked if anyone in the room wanted to comment, Sally Webster came up to speak. "I have been a temporary worker in the elections office opening ballots," she said, "it's my last hour today. And I feel very strongly about what I'm going to tell you today."

Webster said she witnessed the unfolding of the ballot misprint error "from the first phone call that we got about the misprinted ballot all the way through to the final end of what we're doing with our processes."

When subsequent calls came in about Democrats receiving Republican primary ballots, "Katrina immediately started investigating," Webster said, and by the next morning, "she had a plan and she had marching orders, and she told us exactly what we were going to do and how we were going to handle this.

"The plan included every ballot – how it was going to be handled, and how the public was going to be informed. She put protocols in place to see that a free and fair election took place."

Webster also praised the voter office's effort to answer the many phone calls coming in about the incorrect ballots.

"The calls were continuous, they were ceaseless," Webster said, "they could not put the phone down that they didn't have to pick it up and answer again. The stress in the office was very high, and I'm going to remind you that it was no fault of the elections office or its employees....

"Let me just say that Katrina's goal is to see that everyone has the right to vote.... We're really fortunate to have her in this office, because she is a strong leader, and I just think that she deserves commendation for the work that she's done, and I have never had more respect for her as I do right now," Webster concluded.

reads, "Draughan was charged with the use of tear gas against the deceased [Mathieson], as well as committing assault with great bodily injury. During the court proceedings, a criminal protective order was issued.

"On November 8, 2023, Draughan signed a court document stating he did not own or possess any firearms.

Jaime Wilkes, vice-president at Sparetime Supply, was glad to be able to tell the students about their employment opportunities. "Our goal today was to let them know that there is a local company here that has any kind of job that you can think of throughout our business: office jobs, marketing and graphic design, internet and computer technology, warehouse work, drivers, logistics.

We wanted to make sure that the kids know that no matter what they want to do later in life, that they can start at Sparetime, start at the bottom, which gives them experience in something." To learn more, visit https://www.sparetimesupply.com/careers.

We look forward to collaborating with them in the future. We spoke with a lot of juniors who didn't realize that we give out scholarships. We also had seniors who are going to be putting their applications in for scholarships. We made some wonderful connections today."

April 1 benefit for The Pond Club

Submitted by Michelle Hutchins, Blue Zone Project

Judson Howe, president of Mendocino County Adventist Health Hospitals, and the Blue Zone Project - Mendocino County are sponsoring a benefit concert in Willits to support a local health resource at a grassroots level.

The Joe Craven Trio Band, a unique music experience for all ages, performs April 1 at the Little Lake Grange, 291 School Street. Doors open 5 pm; show starts at 6 pm. Proceeds will benefit The Pond Club in Willits.

The Pond Club supports adults who are post-surgery and therapy with organized aquatic aerobics classes. The indoor pool is attached to a private residence, formerly owned by Bobbie Riccio, who bequeathed the property to The Pond Club.

Riccio opened her privately owned pool for many years to older members of the community, and organized aquatic therapy classes taught by certified instructors. Today, the pool opens three days a week with limited capacity. Proceeds from the concert will go to purchase equipment to ozonate and chlorinate the pool, allowing it to open more days a week and to expand access to more people.

The Monday, April 1 concert, a Cosmic Pickle Production, also features the Farmers Market Band. Tickets: $20; kids 12 and under FREE. Advance tickets at Flying Dog Pizza and J.D. Redhouse. Plus food by Turtle Island Tacos and the Fairall's Farm blue food truck. Beer and wine by Northspur Brewing and Frey Vineyards.

Active Lulu

Lulu loves to explore and is always up for new adventures. She has boundless energy and would be the perfect walking and hiking companion, and she thoroughly enjoys swimming, so she'd be the perfect beach dog.

Lulu can have separation anxiety, but we feel that with a little consistency, Lulu can overcome her anxiety. Lulu also tends to guard along fence lines and her area, and can be food aggressive.

If you're looking for an active friend to inspire you to get out in nature, Lulu is the girl for you!

To learn more about Lulu, or to view other adoptable animals, visit www.milofoundation.org or the Milo Foundation Sanctuary Facebook page. The sanctuary is currently doing pet adoptions by appointment only. Please complete a pet-adoption application before requesting an appointment. You can reach the Milo Foundation at 459-4900.

Bart came in with his sister, Lisa, so we think he would be able to live with another cat.

Hanky Panky

What a boy and what a story this boy has! Hank was a stray dog in Redwood Valley for months. He sat like a statue in the vineyards, stoic and calm watching the world go by, accepting food but avoiding capture. Hank was finally caught and ended up at our county shelter. Our community did not let us forget about Hank, and with dogs in danger due to lack of space, we knew his time was running up. We pulled Hank into our program and he quickly earned the nickname Hanky Panky. While we will never know what his past was like, what we do know is that this is one special dog! Hank has made friends here and slowly but surely we are opening up his world. We think his life matters and we want to help him find his place!

The Humane Society for Inland Mendocino is located at 9700 Uva Drive in Redwood Valley. Feel free to visit us, no appointments needed! We are open Wednesday through Friday, 1 to 5 pm; Saturday and Sunday, 11 am to 3 pm; closed Monday and Tuesday. Check out all of our available dogs and cats on our website: www.mendohumanesociety.com, on our Facebook page, and on www.petfinder.com.
