WHS scrambles to keep accreditation

Mike A'Dair
Reporter
mike@willitsweekly.com

The Willits Unified School District received a jolt last week when representatives of the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC) threatened to revoke Willits High School's accreditation.

WUSD Superintendent Patricia Johnson said the threat came after the failure of the high school and school district to implement the goals and objectives for education articulated by the district in its 2011 white paper, "WASC Focus on Learning Self-Study 2010-2011."

The white paper was written at the behest of WASC. It laid out an array of 45 goals and objectives outlining how Willits High School would enhance its educational program to meet the needs of future students.

In 2011, WASC representatives gave Willits High School a six-year accreditation, with a promise to return in 2014 to see how the school was doing on its plan. Last week, after a series of meetings with school staff

You'll pay more for some county services

Supervisors unanimously approved increasing certain county fees on Tuesday.

The daily charge billed to an inmate of juvenile hall went from $20 to $30. The fee for a rabies vaccination at Animal Care and Control went up $2, from $8 to $10, and the fee to implant a microchip under your pet's skin was increased from $15 to $25.

Fees for some vaccinations at the Division of Public Health also went up slightly. The fee for a Hepatitis A vaccination increased from $43 to $50, a B vaccination rose from $55 to $60, while a vaccination against both Hepatitis A and B increased from $53 to $60. The cost of a TDAP (tetanus, diphtheria and pertussis) was raised from $42 to $50.

Supervisors postponed approval of a raft of increases for Alcohol and Other Drug outpatient group meetings. Those charges were slated to be increased by roughly 10

Firing up Dinner!

Brooktrails Fire Department gets ready for Saturday fundraiser

For the 34th time, it will be "all hands on deck" for the annual Brooktrails Firefighter Association's all-you-can-eat spaghetti feed, held this Saturday at the Brooktrails Community Center.

The event will be from 5 to 8 pm and will offer patrons a meat or vegetarian sauce option to top their plates of noodles.

Dine in or take plates to go for $10 each for adults and $5 each for kids under 12. Tickets are available at the door.

To help feed the anticipated crowd, the grocery list has grown to include 75 pounds of meat, 30 to 40 pounds of spaghetti noodles and 25 pounds of onions.

The "sauce crew," the "noodle man" and the rest of the 18-member volunteer department will be cooking, serving and showing the community a fun and family-friendly evening.

The event has always been a great fundraiser for the department and allows them to cover costs of equipment, training and necessities that aren't always able to be covered by district funds.

K-9 arson dog Ashes will give a demonstration of her skills at 6 pm at the department. Her demonstrations are always a hit with kids of all ages.

Other things to check out while at the event include the CERT and Measure K information tables. Coffee mugs, baseball caps and T-shirts featuring the Brooktrails Fire Department will also be available for sale during the fundraiser.

Teachers, trustees clash on district direction

The Willits Unified School District is taking a more conciliatory approach towards its employees, although contemplated moves to expand administrative positions within the district still brought sharp criticism from teachers and other staff at an April 2 school board meeting.

Superintendent Patricia Johnson is trying to get trustee support to rebuild a school district eviscerated by 12 years of budget cuts and shocked by a truncated, costly effort to rebuild and restore school facilities.

At the April 2 meeting, Johnson presented the board with proposals to hire five new administrative positions which, she maintained, would help rebuild the district and allow it to move effectively into the future.

The positions included a director of curriculum and instruction, a director of maintenance, facilities and transportation, a lead transportation staff position, a director of special education, and an accounting technician II.

Johnson was mostly successful in getting the board to follow her lead, although some trustees said they were hesitant to expand the number of administrative positions before a labor agreement has been reached with district employees.

Regarding the director of curriculum and instruction, Johnson argued the current arrangement has not worked well enough. At present, Blosser Lane Elementary School Principal Tawny Fernandez also serves as director of curriculum development.

"Ms. Fernandez has done a good job of holding us together," Johnson said, "but quite honestly, we are not doing enough to make sure our students are moving forward in their education, and we can't do that unless we have a dedicated, full-time person paying attention to this."

"I see this as a very critical position," she added. "Keep in mind, one-third of our staff is knocking on the door of retirement. So within three or four or five years, one-third of our staff will be new teachers. This person will be a very great asset to those new teachers."

Brookside School teacher and Willits Teachers Association President Paula Nunez asked trustees to refrain from new administrative hires until the district has reached an agreement with her union and that of the district's classified employees.

"We think if it's a hardship to pay bills, and if you plan to honor your promises to give us a COLA [cost of living adjustment], then I think you need to take care of priority number one before you take care of priority number two," Nunez said.

Her sentiments were echoed by other people, including Yvonne Winter, a special education instructor at Blosser Lane Elementary School. "When the previous superintendent came in, she was given this great welcome, and she told us we were going to get all these things. But when we asked for something for us, we were told to wait. Well, we've been waiting for eight years. This district is getting top-heavier and top-heavier and top-heavier, and the bottom level

School district may issue new bond

Mike A'Dair

The Willits Unified School District trustees are considering the feasibility of putting out another bond to raise money to pay off the Bond Anticipation Note issued to fund its 2010 school facilities upgrade. The district still owes $735,000 on the $4.9 million note and must pay the balance by July 14.

At an April 2 board meeting, five potential paths to raise the money were discussed. The least controversial step involved selling unused property at 307 East Commercial Street. Trustees approved selling that property for a minimum of $290,000.

The four remaining steps considered were more controversial. Three involved selling bonds; one involved borrowing money from the Mendocino County Office of Education. The three bond-related options would increase property taxes for local residents; the loan from MCOE would not.

Vicki Todd, MCOE chief financial officer, told trustees her agency was

City seeks state funds to pay for water project

Zack Cinek

City Hall is hopeful a grant application it submits this week can win the city funding to pay for its emergency water project.

The application to the California Department of Housing and Community Development needs to be approved by city council members before being submitted by an April 11 deadline.

The city would be asking for up to $1.5 million for its emergency water supply project that will "improve or provide potable water."

Improvements being made or slated to be made to Willits' water supply as part of an emergency water treatment plant are calculated to be about $1.9 million, according to a city report.

California Department of Public Health officials awarded the city $250,000 towards the emergency project in February.

Yes on Measure K

To the Editor:

I'm writing to ask you to vote Yes on Measure K. You can vote for Measure K if you reside in Brooktrails, as a renter or a home owner, and are a registered voter.

Voting Yes on Measure K increases the fire tax by a mere $34 a year (that is 9 cents per day). It's certainly worth pennies a day to keep our fire department equipped and able to continue to respond to our emergencies.

You don't have to be a property owner to need these services, and you don't have to be a property owner to vote for them. The consequences affect all of us living in Brooktrails. Thank you.

Sarah Schuyler, Brooktrails

Yes on Measure K

To the Editor:

Election time is almost here. On the ballot, again, is the tax measure for the Brooktrails Fire Department. No, none of us like to have our taxes increased, but the amount of the increase is so minimal, only $34 per parcel owned, per year. Add that to your already existing fire tax of $65, and it only comes to $99 per year per parcel owned.

We need to pass this measure so equipment can be purchased. One piece would be a water tender truck that is needed if a fire breaks out in an area with no hydrant near. Other items are needed to be replaced because they are just plain old and worn out.

Many of the firemen that come to our rescue are volunteers who are giving of their own time to protect us. It is time for all Brooktrails residents to get out and vote YES on Measure K. Support your fire department and make it possible for them to buy the equipment needed to protect us. The next fire or medical call may be yours! I urge all Brooktrails voters to get out and vote YES on Measure K on June 3. It may save your home, or your life.

Kay Wright, Brooktrails

Bypass northern interchange

To the Editor:

I'd like to set the record straight on some of the facts surrounding the Willits Bypass.

The "northern interchange" consists of everything north and west of the railroad tracks. A document called a LEDPA Analysis put out by Caltrans to the agencies in 2012 described the impacts of the bypass by section. The northern interchange is listed as having 31 acres of wetland impacted. The interchange is a good deal larger than the wetlands. The roundabout area in the existing plan is not wetland. You may remember the farm with the big barn that once was there. This area is easily 9 acres. Thus the interchange is easily 40 acres.

It is quite certain that all of the fill from the mill site, that recently got a use permit to remove 884,000 cubic yards, is going on the northern interchange. Using the SHN report on the fill from the mill site already on the northern end of the bypass, it is possible to calculate what is still left to place. Somewhere in the amount of 150,000 cubic yards are needed to complete the area north of the mile-long bridge that spans the roadway and east of the railroad tracks. That leaves 734,000 cubic yards needed on the northern interchange. It is hard to picture, with a 30 foot overpass over the railroad tracks and a 15 foot overpass over the connector road. Don't forget the railroad is on a levee 10 feet above the rest of the wetlands. This amount of fill will cover an area of 31 acres about 14 feet deep. This sounds about right, as an average, not forgetting that some 3 feet of fill has already been placed.

Contrast this with the amount of fill it would take to build a triangle of earth to bring the two-lane bypass directly from the railroad overpass to the at-grade roundabout intersection Caltrans has in the plans already. The distance from the railroad overpass to the roundabout is roughly 2,000 feet. The fill would start at some 35 feet deep and 300 feet wide, going down to 0 feet deep by 35 feet wide. The average, 17.5 feet deep by 132.5 feet wide by 2,000 feet, long would take about 172,000 cubic yards to fill such a wedge.

This means that somewhere in the area of 560,000 yards of fill would not be needed if the northern interchange were reduced. At the recent hearing for the mill site the spokesman for Mendocino Forest Products came up with the number of 100,000 cubic yard savings. 100,000 cubic yards would fill 31 acres only about 2 feet deep. This is far enough off to be completely absurd.

The northern interchange as a roundabout is already designed and in the plans. It just needs one leg widened and another eliminated. The Purisima Road Roundabout on State Route 246 is a good example of a three-leg roundabout Caltrans not only accepts, but also promotes as a "safety improvement." The Willits roundabout was specifically designed for extra-large STAA trucks. It would need to accommodate many fewer vehicles than either the Highway 246 roundabout or the four-leg roundabout recently built on Highway 20, by Caltrans. A change order is possible, and Caltrans does them all the time.

This project does represent the largest wetland fill in California in 50 years. It has been suggested that both Redwood Shores and Farm Island in the San Francisco Bay were much larger wetland fills. While they were large, the filling was done before the 1960s. Bair Island was filled by Leslie Salt before Redwood Shores housing development was built. Farm Island operated as a farming community before the housing developments, also. "Save the Bay" was formed in 1961 and in two years was successful in stopping all bay filling and passing legislation in 1965. The Clean Water Act was signed until 1972, and the definitions of wetlands have changed over time.

The 380,000 tons of greenhouse gasses produced by building this project was calculated using Caltrans figures in the Draft Environmental Impact Report for how much gasoline would be used to construct the bypass. Anyone want all those numbers?

Wick drains do destroy wetlands, and Caltrans has yet to explain how much of the wetlands downstream of them will be impacted. Every acre of wetland is precious in our state that leads the nation in destroying over 90 percent of our wetlands. The nation and our state have a policy of "no net loss" of wetlands. Before mitigating, it is required to avoid damaging them in the first place. A smaller bypass and a smaller footprint for a two-lane northern intersection would certainly avoid at least 25 acres of wetland.

In this time when we are turning to groundwater for human needs, the recharge of groundwater that a wetland accomplishes is crucial. Mitigation for lost wetlands is notoriously unsuccessful. The 2002 EPA report on wetland creation concludes, "Functional replacement of wetlands has not been conclusively demonstrated."

The Outlet Creek Basin Assessment shows that Outlet Creek has undergone a serious drop in flow since the 1990s. It has likely become a "losing stream," which means the water table has dropped so much it no longer feeds the stream. No matter how big the aquifer is, if you take out more than you recharge every year, you are "spending the principal." This is happening to the biggest aquifer in the country, the Ogallala aquifer, which spans the central plains between the Rocky Mountains and the Mississippi River. Most likely it is happening here, and the plan to pump more groundwater while destroying wetlands in the same aquifer is not a good idea.

What can we do? Call on our elected officials to support using the roundabout intersection as the northern interchange of the Willits bypass is a start.

Outwit the Drought!

Drip irrigation talk by author Robert Kourik

Friends of the Willits Library sponsored an exciting presentation last Sunday at the Willits Library with gardening expert Robert Kourik. He spoke to a standing-room-only crowd on the value of using drip irrigation.

"Daily drip irrigation during the drought: A discussion about daily versus intermittent irrigation" was the topic of his presentation.

This innovative speaker has written several books on gardening and has been called the "drip guru" by Organic Gardening magazine. "Maybe not the most flattering title in the world," Kourik said, "but I like it." Quite a timely presentation for our little community: where we are facing a drought year and all the challenges that come with maintaining landscapes and gardens in Willits.

Water is one of our most precious resources. It is the life blood of not only our gardens, but all living things. How water is distributed and shared and conserved has become a national issue as well as a local one. As we become more aware of the importance of this vital natural resource, finding ways to use it wisely and learning how to conserve it becomes ever more important.

"Drought years teach us to appreciate water and to become more water wise," writes Mary Buckley, a Mendocino County University of California Cooperative Extension master gardener, in a flyer entitled "Water-Wise Gardening in a Drought Year" (<http://cemendocino.ucanr.edu/files/186022.pdf>).

Kourik presented practical and useful tips for using drip irrigation not only to save water, but to have healthier plants as well. Totally informative and with a great sense of humor, Kourik's discussion and slide show featured strategies for gardening in dry times for every type of landscape and garden. He explained how crop yields can be up to 48 percent higher with drip irrigation, while saving water.

"For the home gardener, the bottom line is the health of the landscape and garden," stated Kourik. "Here, drip irrigation's value shines far above all other watering methods." He believes that drip-irrigated plants usually grow better than those that are hand-watered or watered with sprinklers. "Trees grow faster, with wider trunks, and you get better blooms on flowers and healthier vegetables.

Community Foundation gives grants to seven North County projects

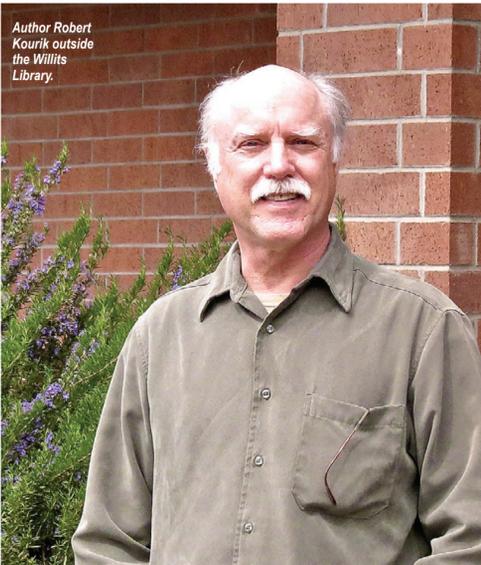

Seven non-profit organizations from Willits, Laytonville, Leggett and Round Valley have been awarded more than $20,000 from the Community Foundation of Mendocino County's 2014 Community Enrichment Grant Program. The grants will provide funding to emergency services, youth services, health and nutrition promotion, and education.

"We had great applications from all over the county," stated Director of Grants and Programs Megan Barber Allende. "The grants to the northern inland region were very well distributed across a broad spectrum of areas of interest." The grants come from the Community Endowment Fund, one of 140 funds from the Community Foundation administrators. "The Community Endowment Fund is undesignated, so we're able to provide funding in the areas where we see the greatest potential for impact and community enrichment. Our regional advisors help us determine the local priorities."

The Commonwealth Garden in Willits is one of the programs that received Community Foundation funding this year. The funding will help with the completion of a new produce stand, which will include a sales counter, cold and dry storage, a bathroom, and an office.

The Commonwealth Garden is located on Howard Memorial Hospital Foundation property, and its primary purpose is to provide produce for the hospital. According to Garden Coordinator Keith Johnson, in the last year volunteers from the garden were able to fulfill a good percentage of the hospital's produce needs. "Sometimes they needed something we weren't growing, but of the things we were growing, we were able to meet all their orders," Johnson said. "This year we expect to produce more of some items than the hospital will be able to use. With the new produce stand, we'll be able to sell excess to the public."

The Commonwealth Garden was one of 26 organizations to receive a 2014 Community Enrichment Grant from the Community Foundation. Susanne Norgard, executive director for the foundation, notes: "When we established the Community

Author Robert Kourik outside the Willits Library.

And all this with less fungal disease, mildews, or rusts, due to the drier foliage of the drip-irrigated plant," Kourik said.

He presented many graphs to prove his points, and took the listeners through the basics of setting up a drip irrigation system for a typical garden and also for more advanced landscapes. Showing a simple schematic of a drip irrigation system, he explained how to use the solid drip hoses or tubing, compression tees and elbows, emitters, pressure regulators and filters. All the things that I had found quite confusing, were so easily explained by this knowledgeable speaker. It actually looked like something that I could do myself.

Although Kourik says he is not beholden to any one company for supplies and information, he did state that our local irrigation company, DripWorks on Sanhedrin Circle in Willits, has some of the best drip irrigation products at the most reasonable prices.

For more information on setting up and maintaining a drip system, I would highly recommend his book "Drip Irrigation for Every Landscape and All Climates." The book's subhead reads: "Helping your garden flourish while conserving water! Outwit droughts with expert guidance." It has all the information, pictures, graphs and tons of answered questions needed to have a fully functional drip-irrigated garden and landscape.

Endowment Fund in 2004 with donations from people throughout our county, our goal was to have a flexible way of funding the important needs of the community as they change over time. The fund is now large enough to produce earnings that allow us to provide $100,000 a year in grants to local causes." Norgard went on to explain that as the fund grows, so does the Community Foundation's ability to make grants. "Anyone can contribute to the fund, and it's a great way to give back to the community."

Willits Community Services also received a grant from the Community Foundation to help them expand food storage capacity. Other area grantees included Laytonville Healthy Start, the Leggett Fire Protection District, Friends of Round Valley Public Library, and the Round Valley Indian Health Center.

'The Dining Room' opens April 18 at Willits Community Theatre

Evocative, overlapping family dramas move the action inexorably in A.R. Gurney's "The Dining Room," which opens at the Willits Community Theatre on Friday, April 18 at 8 pm.

Gurney's deft portrayal of middle-class characters taking turns around a main table brings forth a sharp sense of familiar reality. During the Depression, a father tells his son how he must micro-manage his own life. A female college student typing up her term paper for a master's degree argues with her husband.

The room begins to resonate with its own energy from the ambitions of a maid deciding to leave her long-held position, the embarrassment of two illicit lovers interrupted by a son's early return home, a psychiatrist needing an impromptu waiting room, and a circle of children celebrating a raucous birthday party.

A graduate of the Yale School of Drama, Gurney wrote several plays before the resounding success of "The Dining Room" allowed him to write full-time. With this eloquent play, the dining room itself becomes the center of an elegant, captivating, and always flawed human universe.

"The Dining Room" runs from April 18 to May 4, with shows on Thursdays at 7 pm for $10, Fridays and Saturdays at 8 pm for $15, and two Sunday matinees at 2 pm for $10. Tickets are available in person at Mazahar, 38 South Main Street; online at brownpapertickets.com/event/profile/600848; or phone the WCT office at 459-0895 for credit card orders. A special benefit performance for the Soroptimists will be held on Thursday, April 24 at 7pm; tickets for this event are $15 and available through Marilyn Harden at 459-5649.

Somebody said get a life ... so they did

Such is the tagline for the still-popular film, "Thelma and Louise," released in 1991 and still widely available on a number of movie venues. In fact, over the past week or more that movie has been playing on such a continuing basis on cable movie channels and TVGN that I had to ask myself why. Running a close second during this same time period has been "Dead Poets Society," which debuted in 1989. Its tagline is "Carpe Diem."

Why, nearly 25 years after these films' initial releases, are they suddenly such hot tickets? What kind of trend or collective consciousness is focusing our attention on the two women friends whose attempt to get a life and seize the day ends up with their driving over the edge of what appears to be the Grand Canyon, while the actions of an idealistic, unorthodox private school instructor contribute to the death of one of his students and to his own professional demise? I have an idea.

Americans seem to be caught in a literal "mudslide" of high expectations, with lowered opportunities to achieve those expectations. When I saw those tragic images of the mudslide catastrophe in Washington state, I saw both horrific reality and a larger metaphor from which there appears to be little chance for escape.

People in our country, indeed many in our own town, too easily fall prey to a mindset of inertia and capitulation to forces seemingly beyond our control. Caltrans was and still is for some a kind of monster bent upon affecting an environmental mudslide upon our community. For Thelma and Louise, the monster was male chauvinism, which denied them equality at the hands of some rather extreme cultural male stereotypes, the only exception being Harvey Keitel's portrayal of a sympathetic detective. For Robin Williams' passionately idealistic teacher, the monster was a provincial educational model which ultimately contributed to the loss of both a physical life and a professional one.

What these three characters have and still have in common is the belief that life cannot, will not, be sacrificed to any kind of status quo or commercial monolith.

In contrast, the current market for medications treating depression is at an all-time high, higher in fact than in any other country in the world. Right next to the demand for those medications is an increasing demand for drugs of escape and enhancement, to the point of pandemic addiction. Carpe diem has become carpe the daze, and getting a life is all too often about just getting by inside the life one already has.

Maybe that is why these two movies are currently so popular. Here in Willits, the driving forces behind those movies seem to have taken root, and, as featured in a recent edition of this newspaper, one of the lead stories was about new businesses starting up in our own community.

Another long-established business, Al's Redwood Room, is about to transform their bar area into a more comfortable and aesthetic environment where town residents (and tourists) looking for an appealing bar/restaurant destination will have another place to gather. More determination, more growth.

I would like to think that media programmers were operating out of some enlightenment when they decided to saturate our viewing screens with these two movies in recent days. Regardless, and anyone's age aside, it's time to jump into that '66 Thunderbird and head for the open road of opportunity. Just make sure to avoid those steep canyons.

Shining their Showing Skills

Equine clinic planned to help prepare riders for upcoming Willits Frontier Days events

Not everyone has the advantage of consistently working with an instructor to help hone their riding skills and prepare them for horsey events, so Willits Frontier Days has decided to help this year by hosting an equine clinic.

The clinic will be held on May 17 at the Rodeo Grounds and will offer groups of riders an affordable, one-day bombardment of info from several industry professionals to help prepare them for this summer's events.

Many instructors are planning to attend, including Elaine Mancini, Marta Bartow, Maryanne Underhill, Sheri Cronin, Terri Silva and Nicol Persico Kunka. Even more names are being added to the schedule as the event gets closer.

Students should expect to learn a wide variety of topics during the event: proper riding techniques including hand, foot, head and leg placement, understanding leads, bending and flexion, how to fit saddles and bridles, vaulting techniques, trailering safety, appropriate tack and attire, shoeing and veterinary information, and much more.

Stations with each instructor will be set up, allowing small groups to "round robin" around the grounds to each station over the course of the day. Small groups will allow each student to have dedicated focus and assistance at each location.

In order to help keep the groups small, the clinic will be limited to 40 entrants. Applications are available now at ER Energy in Willits. There is a $20 entry fee, which includes the day's activities, which start at 8 am, an event T-shirt and lunch.

'A Whale of a Story'

Willits readers – children and adults – are invited to celebrate the publication of a new local book, "Composting Abbie: A Whale of a Story," at a free party at the County Museum in Willits on Friday, April 25 from 5 to 7 p.m.

Willits writer Jed Diamond wrote the story; Willits artist Ann Maglinte illustrated the book with watercolor paintings; and Mendocino composer Martin Mileck ... well, more about his role below:

"This is the true story of a whale, a tragic accident, and a man who had a brilliant idea that turned a tragedy into an opportunity to grow food and flowers for children," the text on the back page of the book begins. "The story was first reported on October 19, 2009, when a massive blue whale washed ashore just south of Fort Bragg, not far from the world-famous Mendocino Coast Botanical Gardens. The 72-foot blue whale was struck and killed by a marine research vessel about seven miles off the coast of Fort Bragg earlier in the day...."

"One of the local residents called Martin Mileck, the owner of Cold Creek Compost, to see if he could help. No one had ever tried to compost a whale, but Martin thought he could do it. 'I know I can compost this whale instead of sending her to a dump site,' Martin decided. 'We'll give the whale compost to schools and community gardens to grow food and flowers for people. For us there's no such thing as waste. Everything can, and should be, recycled.'"

"Composting Abbie" is a story and a book for children of all ages, in celebration of Earth Day – April 22 – and everyday sustainability.

Families are especially invited to the April 25 book-signing and event; the book is officially designated for children age 9 and up, but "it's a great read-aloud book," Maglinte said, "and is very enjoyable for adults, too."

Sheila Semens, executive director of the Noyo Center in Fort Bragg, will be coming to Willits from the coast for the event, to present a talk and slide show about her first-hand experience with the whale, Maglinte told Willits Weekly. Semens was part of the process of carrying 70 tons of whale up a 40-foot cliff and burying the bones in the forest to be cleaned. She is now in charge of reconstructing the skeleton which will be on display at the new Noyo Science Center being built in Fort Bragg. Also, Maglinte said, Antonia Partridge will speak about using the whale compost in her work with students at the Brookside Garden project at Brookside Elementary school. "We will also have lots of pictures on display about the whale and the process of composting it," Maglinte said, including photos of some of the gardens where the whale compost was used.

Refreshments and wine from the Frey Winery will be served. Museum admission and refreshments are free at the event. Books will be available for purchase, too.

The program starts at 5 pm with a chance to see the displays, sip some wine, and talk informally with Diamond, Maglinte, and Mileck. Talks start at 5:45 pm, and the book signing starts at 6:30 pm.

... and so it begins

Haley Schuck-Verdot – first 2014 WFD Sweetheart contestant announced

Even though it feels like the Fourth of July is still months away, May is just around the corner, and that marks the official green-light go-ahead for the 2014 Willits Frontier Days Sweetheart contest. May 1st is the date contestants can get out on the streets and start selling those all-important tickets.

This year, Haley Schuck-Verdot is the first to announce her plans to run for the title, and she's excited to get going on May 1.

Haley, an 18-year-old senior at Willits High School, has lived in Willits since she was 2 years old and has been riding horses since she could remember. Running for Sweetheart has been something she always has wanted to do, she said: a rite of passage she's looking forward to being a part of.

"I've always wanted to be a Sweetheart," explained Haley. "I have watched the others doing it while I was growing up, and I would love to be a part of that Willits history, too!"

Currently, Haley is riding with the Willits High School Rodeo team, enjoying running barrels in "big" arenas and breakaway roping off her 7-year-old Palomino mare.

"She's so tall and big that we really like to have the room to run and move when we do barrels," she laughed.

Last year, Haley also spent time at Camp Wente where she assisted with the Boy Scouts' horse camp program.

She lived at the camp during the event and helped with many aspects, including teaching horsemanship classes, the basics of bridling, saddling, grooming, types of breeds, colors, feeding and much more. She helped guide overnight trail rides and enjoyed sharing her knowledge of horses with the students.

Continuing the sharing theme, Haley said she'll be excited to keep instructing and informing folks about horses and the Willits Frontier Days event as a whole, if she is able to win the title of Sweetheart this year. She'd be happy to represent Willits at all the area rodeos and events throughout the year.

Haley is also assisting with the Willits Frontier Days Equine Clinic, to be held May 17, as part of her senior project for Willits High School. Haley helped to get the instructors signed up and helped in the overall planning of the event.

Anyone interested in contacting Haley for Frontier Days tickets must wait to buy them until after the May 1 start date and contact her via phone or text at 485-4043 or email her at haleyschuck@willitsunified.com. She also plans to be at many of the local events leading up to the Fourth of July celebrations including nearby rodeos, the Willits Horsemen events, Hometown Celebration and more.

is getting more and more stressed and discouraged."

Trustee Alex Bowlds said he was reluctant to approve any new administrative positions until a new contract had been reached with the district's two main bargaining units, those of certificated employees (teachers) and classified employees (non-teaching line staff).

Trustee Christopher Neary added he expected an agreement would be reached soon.

Over the past decade, labor agreements have routinely taken a year or more to iron out. In spite of this, Neary said, "I don't see any reason why we shouldn't have an agreement with both unions by June 1."

Board Chairwoman Sappina Rodriguez said she was reluctant to approve hiring a new director of curriculum until she had a better picture of how that piece would fit into the overall budget.

Neary moved to approve the job description, and to direct Johnson to advertise it, but not to hire anyone to fill the position. That motion was approved, 3-1, with Bowlds voting no.

The board also approved a new job description for the position of director of maintenance, facilities and transportation (DMFT).

Johnson is seeking to replace Sandy Eddie, who is retiring at the end of May, and who stepped in as director of maintenance when the departments of transportation and maintenance were combined during the darkest of budgetary days.

Johnson also asked trustees to create a new position of lead staff person for transportation, who would basically run the Transportation Department with oversight from the new DMFT.

The board approved the position of DMFT by a 4-0 vote. It directed Johnson to seek applicants for the new position and to conduct initial interviews, although it reserved to itself the right to hire for the position. The board also directed discussion on the lead staff person for transportation be tabled.

The board approved two other new positions sought by Johnson, those of director of special education and accounting technician II.

Trustee Laurie Harris was absent from the meeting.

and administration, they determined the school had not done enough to implement its plan, and threatened to pull Willits High's accreditation.

Instead, according to Johnson, the WASC reps proposed to offer the school a one-year grace period, during which the school must rewrite the 2011 plan and outline a method to implement its newly articulated goals.

Willits High School Principal Jeff Ritchley provided Willits Weekly with a copy of the white paper. Six of the 45 goals, chosen randomly, are listed below:

1. Understand career technical education standards. Define skill-based standards.
2. Study of guided instruction and collaboration instructional strategies.
3. Implementation of standards-based data-driven local assessments in all non-core classes.
4. Expanded implementation of innovated grading system for pilot program in all grade 9 through 10 classes.
5. Analysis of A-G course enrollment and WHS students who met or nearly met A-G completion.
6. Evaluation of College Going Initiative programs at Willits High School.

"Very few goals [in the 2011 plan] were met," Johnson said "I think, for whatever reason, we created an environment where we thought, as long as we can get through today, we're OK."

"And it isn't as if the students are suffering," she noted. "In fact, our students are doing very well, and the test scores show that. It's just, we just don't have a blueprint or a road map that talks about where we are going to be as a school in the next three to five years. We don't have a vision of where we are going."

Johnson has directed a concentrated effort be made over the next year to draft a new plan. She said she wants a plan that has three to five goals, not 45.

"It will take a focused effort on the part of the site administrators, the faculty, and the parents in the community," Johnson said, "but we will get it done. Failure is not an option."

Johnson added the offer of a one-year grace period is not set in stone. She noted the offer was merely a proposal made by the two WASC representatives, and had not yet been endorsed by the organization's administration. Johnson added she felt certain the offer would be endorsed by WASC.

However, according to HHS Communications Director Kristina Grogan, AODP staff had received new information that caused them to withdraw the item from the board agenda. Grogan said the AODP item will be reconsidered in December.

The board also declined to increase planned increases for two items provided by the Division of Animal Care and Control. Charges for cat carriers were to be increased from zero to $5, and charges for kennels (large cages for dogs or for a number of dogs) were to be increased considerably. However the board discovered there was already a charge for cat carriers, and considered that charge to be adequate. Supervisors asked staff to reconsider its proposed charge for dog kennels.

One charge did go down. The county's Department of Emergency Medical Services had been tacking on a $4.75 charge each time a patient was admitted to a hospital emergency room. That charge was eliminated. County staff reported "that cost is covered in the EMS receiving hospital authorization or the base hospital contract."

Tax sharing committee: county cool to Ukiah offer

Mendocino County representatives on the Joint Ad-Hoc Tax-Sharing Committee, supervisors Dan Hamburg and John McCowen, did not officially reject the provisions of a March 11 offer by representatives from the City of Ukiah, but they came close to it.

"I don't think this is a good enough scenario so that I could go to the board of supervisors and say, 'You ought to vote for this,'" said Hamburg. "I look at these numbers and they aren't very exciting."

Mike A'Dair

When asked by Ukiah City Councilman Phil Baldwin if the county was, in fact, rejecting the Ukiah proposal, McCowen replied: "We're not rejecting it. But I think it's fair to say we aren't exactly embracing it."

The March 11 proposal from the city is not easy to describe. First of all, the money on the table is not the whole pool of tax revenues between the City of Ukiah and the Ukiah Valley Area Plan (UVAP) area. In fact it's only 1 percent of those revenues: the so-called Bradley-Burns 1 percent revenues, the 1 percent of sales tax revenues state law allows local jurisdictions to spend as they see fit.

The UVAP area is the unincorporated county land surrounding Ukiah. It includes residential, commercial, industrialized and agricultural lands running nearby from Hopland to Calpella.

The March 11 proposal stipulated that what is to be shared is the difference between the actual Bradley-Burns tax revenues in any given year, and hypothetical revenues calculated using a 2 percent Consumer Price Index expansion factor, based on what those revenues were in 2007-08. For the purposes of intelligibility, let's call this CPI-factored revenue the indexed revenue, because it is calculated using a 2 percent Consumer Price Index factor.

That's a very important number in the City of Ukiah's offer. It indicates what the tax revenues for both the city and the county would have been, had no tax-sharing agreement been reached.

Under the city's offer, what is to be shared is the difference in tax revenues arising from the enlightened planning between the two entities going forward, and a reasonable assumption of what would have gone to both entities had they not decided to work together.

Under the city's offer, that difference is to be split 70/30, with Ukiah receiving 70 percent and 30 percent going to the county.

At a March 25 meeting, Ukiah staff presented the county side with a chart showing how their offer would play out over the next eight years. The chart included some questionable assumptions, including a 4 percent growth rate from 2013 to 2019 and a 3 percent growth rate from 2020 to 2023. Those assumptions and the 70-30 split recommended by the city yielded results that were not encouraging to Hamburg and McCowen.

For example, in 2014-15, the city is projected to receive

Construction and water outfits contracted for working on the project include Bud Garman Construction Services, Groundwater Pump and Well, Mendocino Construction Services, Fisch Brothers' well drilling, and consulting firm Water Works Engineers.

Mayor Holly Madrigal and Councilman Bruce Burton were scheduled to be out-of-town for a mediation session dealing with the sewer lawsuit between Brooktrails and Willits this week.

That leaves Vice Mayor Ron Orenstein, Councilman Larry Stranske and Councilwoman Madge Strong to be present for a hearing on the grant application and to vote on a resolution supporting it.

allowed to loan money to districts, and had done so in the past. She added that, to her knowledge, no other Mendocino County school district has yet applied for a loan for the coming fiscal year. Todd said MCOE would charge the district interest at the rate of 0.58 percent. On a $500,000 loan, the interest would be $2,900.

Todd added she would inquire whether MCOE would be willing to make the money available to Willits Unified, should the district seek a loan, at an April 14 board of education meeting.

Trustees also discussed the three bond options. Under Option 1, the school district would issue a new bond only to pay off the $500,000 owing on the 2010 Bond Anticipation Note. This assumes the East Commercial Street property sells for the $290,000 asking price, and that money from that sale is used to help pay off the BAN.

Option 1 would increase school-related taxes on district property owners by $21.25 per $100,000 of assessed valuation for three years. Currently, property owners are paying an estimated $32.29 per $100,000. If the board issues another bond under the Option 1 scenario, taxpayers would see that rate rise to $53.54 per $100,000 for three years. After the third year, property taxes would revert to $38.22, the rate they would be paying in 2017 even if the board does nothing.

Interest for Option 1 is 2.20 percent. Total Option 1 cost is $593,407. That would include $55,000 to issue the bond, a $10,000 underwriter's fee, and a $10,000 bond insurance premium.

Option 2 would issue a bond for for voluntary water conservation. A Phase I water emergency is declared.

November 18: A Phase II water emergency is declared by council members.

December 30: City engineers begin to draw up plans for an emergency water supply system.

January 7: County supervisors declare a local emergency due to dry conditions.

January 8: A Phase V water emergency is declared by the city council meaning 150 gallons per day for homes and 35 percent cuts for businesses.

January 8: Council members vote to enact a local emergency for Willits.

January 28: California Department of Public Health names Willits as one of 17 communities with a vulnerable water supply.

$1,180,000. This would raise $500,000 to pay off the Bond Anticipation Note and would also include the same $75,000 in fees, costs and premiums as would Option 1. It also would raise an additional $636,898 for the district, which could be used to upgrade and restore district facilities.

Option 2 would raise district residents' property taxes by $26.97 per $100,000 of assessed valuation for a total of five years. In the sixth year, 2019, taxes would be $59.94 per $100,000 of assessed valuation, whereas taxes are estimated to be $59.07 per $100,000 should the board do nothing.

Option 3 would raise $1,325,000. It would include the same costs for fees, premiums and costs for issuance as the other two options, and would raise the same principal of $500,000 to pay off the Bond Anticipation Note. However, it would raise an additional $788,121 for the district, to be used on facilities.

The financial spread sheet provided by Greg Isom, a district financial advisor, was somewhat confusing. Whereas estimated future costs to taxpayers for options 1 and 2 were calculated assuming a conservative 2 percent growth rate in property values, for Option 3 Isom assumed a growth rate of 3 percent. According to his projections, should the district choose Option 3 there would be almost no difference between the tax burden relative to it and that associated with Option 2. What the tax burden would be under an assumed growth rate of 2 percent is unknown.

When asked in a separate conversation how the district could the city would not pay the county anything.

For 2017-18, the city would have a projected revenue of $5,129,794. Its indexed revenue would be $5,057,260. Therefore, its real revenue would be $72,534 more than its standard revenue.

For the same fiscal year, the UVAP area would have real revenue of $2,169,852 and an indexed revenue of $2,248,102. Therefore, the UVAP area would have taken in $116,545 less in reality than it should have done under the indexed calculation. The UVAP area's shortfall of $116,545 is deleted from the balance books. The city's surplus of $72,534 is divided between the city and the county on a 70/30 split. So the city keeps $50,774 and writes the county a check for $21,760.

The chart provided by city staff indicates the UVAP area consistently takes in less in reality than the indexed calculation says it should have. The shortfalls decline from $218,718 in 2014-15 to $14,647 in 2021-22. It is only in fiscal 2022-23 that UVAP areas are projected to make more in reality than the indexed calculation states it should have.

At the same time, the City of Ukiah will consistently bring in more in reality than the indexed calculation. Therefore, the size of the checks the city would write to the county increases each year, from $21,760 in 2017-18, to $122,921 in 2022-23.

During discussions on the chart, county executive office staff person David Grim questioned the assumptions of a 4 percent and 3 percent growth rate from 2013 to 2023.

"This constant line is more in line with what we might see in property tax," Grim said.

"If these numbers are overly optimistic, then the date at which revenues from this agreement would flow toward the county would be pushed out even further."

As the meeting drew to a close, members from the county side questioned some of the key assumptions of the Ukiah proposal. Hamburg asked why Ukiah wanted a base year of 2007-2008. He also asked why Ukiah wanted a 70-30 split.

"I have done a lot of research on tax-sharing agreements in California," Baldwin replied, "and do you know what I have found? In the very few agreements that have been reached, there's not another city in California that has gone beyond a 90-10 split. Not one. Not one. To my mind, this is a tremendously generous and novel agreement."

The county team called for an April 22 meeting and requested another raft of tables, incorporating different assumptions, but could not agree on what assumptions they wanted. They left it to the staff of the two entities to decide what new assumptions the committee would consider.

February 10: CDPH awards Willits $250,000 for its emergency water supply project.

February 18: City manager and mayor travel to Sacramento and speak about drought to members of the state Assembly.

March 12: Phase V water rationing is rolled back to Phase IV, allowing more water for homes and businesses.

March 26: City Hall rewrites its water emergency plan and shortens it to three emergency stages. It allows City Hall to install water flow restrictors on high-users.

March 26: Council members vote to enact a Stage II water emergency that limits residential water users to 160 gallons a day and asks businesses to use no more than 80 percent of their normal consumption.

unilaterally raise the tax burden on area residents, Johnson replied voters had given the district that right when they approved Measure B in 2010. That measure gave the district the right to issue $43 million in bonds for facility improvements. To date the district has issued $18 million in bonds.

However, voter authorization is only part of the story: School districts can only issue bonds according to their "bonding capacity," an amount based on total assessed real estate property values within the district.

In November 2012, bond expert Lori Raineri described the $43 million in bond sales authorized by Measure B as "far exceeding" the Willits school district's actual bonding capacity. Raineri was hired by the Mendocino County Office of Education to do an analysis of the district's bond plan, which she called "flawed."

Also in question is the district's "taxing capacity," or the statutory upper limit any district can tax individual properties. During her November 2012 report to the school board, Raineri said the Willits school district was "very close" to that statutory limit. She estimated, at that time, the district could only issue between $1.425 million and $1.65 million in additional bonds.

Trustees said they wanted to hear from constituents before deciding which way to go. A public meeting on the issue is set April 23 at 5 pm in the media center at Willits High School.

Furry Friends

Hoping for a Home

Meet Otis, the very friendly and loving Lilac Point Siamese! He is about 10 months old, and a very sweet young guy. Otis is very affectionate and just loves to sit on your lap and be petted. Currently he is living in our cat colony room at the shelter, and so we think he'd make a great family pet as well. We would love for you to come down to the Ukiah Animal Shelter during shelter hours, and hang out with Otis or any of our other wonderful other cats, to see if we have a cat that you'd like to take home with you! Otis is already neutered, so he can go home with you the same day you adopt him.

We also have many dogs available for adoption, awaiting their forever homes as well. All of our animals will be spayed or neutered, given age-appropriate vaccinations, and micro-chipped before going to their new homes. In addition, cats are tested for FELV/FIV and dogs are tested for heartworm.

The Ukiah Animal Shelter is located at 298 Plant Road in Ukiah, and our adoption hours are Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 10 am to 4:30 pm and Wednesday from 10 am to 6:30 pm. The shelter has a new website: www.mendoshelterpets.com; to view our adoptable cats, please visit www.adoptapet.com/shelter71965-cats. For more info, contact Adoption Coordinator Katherine Houghtby at 707-467-6453 or houghtbyk@co.mendocino.ca.us, or come in during shelter hours.
