Water availability is the next county crisis

Jennifer Poole Editor & Reporter willitsweekly@gmail.com

The Mendocino County Supervisors Board of dire heard forecasts about water availability and California's ongoing drought at their meeting Tuesday, at a workshop organized by the board's ad hoc water committee. First District Supervisor Glenn McGourty and Second District Supervisor Mo Mulheren.

At the special meeting of the Mendocino County Board of Supervisors on Monday, April 19, the Cannabis Cultivation and Cannabis Facilities Ordinances will be considered. Due to the high level of public interest on these matters, it is anticipated that the board may not have sufficient time to hear from all speakers who sign up. Although the board has scheduled a special meeting for these two items, early indications are that there may be more people wishing to speak on

Fruit Blossom Beauty

Warm weather makes for beautiful blooms, and hopefully fruit, too!

It's sure feeling a lot like spring for the last few days with wonderful sunny weather and blossoms appearing everywhere, including the apple and pear trees. Sunshine is only part of the recipe for a delicious fruit harvest, however; another major component is rain - which we certainly have not had our fair share of yet.

Maybe more rain is on the horizon, but in the meantime, giving fruit trees a little extra boost of water from the hose, any water tanks or catch barrels, or even saving shower water or sink water (with biodegradable soaps!) can help get the trees through this drought.

No on 10% cannabis expansion To the Editor:

To the Mendocino County Board of Supervisors: As a resident of the Willits area, Little Lake Valley, I have a number of concerns regarding the "Wild West" mentality related to cannabis grows in our area

One of these concerns is the extensive burden that will be placed on our already stressed water resources. If the county proceeds with allowing up to 10% of a parcel's land mass for cannabis cultivation. it would be reasonable to postulate that there would be further drawdown of the valley's aquifer. There is more than anecdotal evidence that excessive water consumption by cannabis growers has resulted in existing shallow wells, i.e. approximately 30 feet, to go dry. How many homeowners, whose sole water source is their well, have the financial means to drill a new "deep well," to the tune of $ 20,000 to $25,000?

Mendocino County has been in an ongoing drought, with no relief in sight in the foreseeable future. That being the case, then why further exacerbate the situation by The County of Mendocino has given Sober Grad preliminary potentially increasing water usage by 30 to 50 percent?

In case you haven't noticed, there has been a significant increase in the number of water tanker trucks plying our rural roads. Am I so foolish to assume that there are that many construction jobs that require that much water for dust control?

Other issues that I see as problematic:

• The permitting process

Overall cannabis program management

• Compliance, site inspections, i.e. terms and conditions of the permit

Adequate means to actively enforce requirements

Site-specific land usage

Water quality and availability

· Air quality, i.e. odor mitigation

I believe that it is incumbent on our elected officials to adhere to the requirements of CEQA to fully assess the potential impacts as it relates to Phase 3 implementation.

Though not necessarily an environmental issue, when has the quality of life been assessed? What do citizens of this county (not just those with the most money and loudest voices) really wish to see as a desired outcome?

The issue is not unique to Mendocino County; just look south to Sonoma County that is wrestling with similar issues and a populace that is less than enthusiastically receptive and have registered similar complaints as to those locally.

All being said, I would opine that some of my concerns would be valid whether I live in Willits, Redwood Valley, Ukiah, Boonville, Fort Bragg or Leggett. Let's collectively spend the necessary time, resources and effort to "get it right the first time." Vote No!

Thank you for considering my concerns.

Shared concerns about social media To the Editor:

This letter is a response to Robin Goldner's column "Data Mines and Dopamine" in Willits Weekly.

I share Robin's concerns about the misinformation spread about vaccines and other important health-related issues and ways many large internet companies contribute to these problems. "I am not a conspiracy theorist but I do read and think about the effects of the internet on humans," Goldner said, "In my opinion the vaccine doesn't infiltrate our minds, but big tech companies do. I am convinced that corporations like Microsoft, Facebook, Twitter, Google and YouTube already infiltrate and influence our minds."

We should all be concerned about this problem that has influenced our elections and endangers our democracy and our lives. Shoshana Zuboff is a professor emerita at Harvard Business School and faculty associate at Berkman Center for Internet and Society at Harvard Law School. She is also the author of "The Age of Surveillance Capitalism: The Fight for a Human Future at the New Frontier of Power.

In the book Zuboff offers a disturbing picture of how Silicon Valley and other corporations are mining users' information to predict and shape their behavior. "I define surveillance capitalism," says Zuboff, "as the unilateral claiming of private human experience as free raw material for translation into behavioral data. These data are then computed and packaged as prediction products and sold into behavioral futures markets - business customers with a commercial interest in knowing what we will do now, soon, and later."

Zuboff was also one of the experts in the recent film "The Social Dilemma," a docudrama directed by Jeff Orlowski (who directed "Chasing Ice and Chasing Coral"). The film goes into depth on how social media's design is meant to nurture an addiction, manipulate its use in politics, and is Sober Grad's biggest fundraiser of the year, our Take spread conspiracy theories. The film features interviews with many former employees, executives, and other 2019 JAMA Pediatrics study showing the risk of depression for adolescents rises with each hour spent on social media.

There are certainly many benefits of social media. and most of us use the internet for work and pleasure. Yet, there is a growing concern.

The creators of the film say, "To support the need for bold reform of Big Social's business model, we have ioined the coalition of 40+ advocacy groups led by Accountable Tech calling for a ban on surveillance advertising. As legislators reflect on the testimony shared during last week's hearing, this is a critical moment to make your voice heard."

No to big grows

In a recent letter, ex-Supervisor John McCowen tried to make the case that we should allow big grows and give up our Rangeland zone to the cannabis industry. His logic is that because we've allowed water for other agriculture, in fairness, we should allocate water for cannabis, too.

Apparently he is not capable of dealing with the reality of our situation, which is that our water has been overallocated, and we have vet another drought year ahead of us. And this will likely be the norm in years ahead with climate change upon us. Real leadership deals with the science and the facts at hand even if those facts are not desirable. We've seen no indication of leadership so far on this matter, excepting John Haschak. So, heads up folks, they are working hard to shove this one down our throats and rushing this through to avoid an EIR.

A recent memorandum by the State Water Resources Control Board to 40,000 farmers, municipal officials and others warned of potential water shortages. They urged us to start planning now for potential water shortages later in the year and recommended a reduction in irrigated acreage, among other things. Farmers don't truck in their soil and their water and are not artificially supported like the cannabis industry is.

In addition to this cautionary warning, we have recent letters from the Laytonville Area Municipal Advisory Council and the Round Valley County Water District stating they now have quality and/or quantity water problems which they believe are cannabis-related.

Among the over 400 letters submitted to the Planning Commission, (about 98% in opposition to this expansion plan), were letters from folks in both Laytonville and Covelo complaining that their wells had gone dry once the big growers moved in. Some of those big growers are the very growers that John McCowen and Supervisor Ted Williams are favoring with this plan, and the county has done nothing to help those folks with the dry wells. This is why we need an environmental impact report on this plan to know what the cumulative impacts will be. The county is ignoring public opinion, rushing this plan through to avoid the EIR, which would reveal the actual impacts - the science.

McCowen claims there is a cannabis shortage, but actually the market is already glutted and the price is low. Canada and Mexico legalized their industry, and federal legislation is headed to the Senate floor soon, so this price drop is likely to remain the trend. This expansion is all about shortterm gains, if that, with long-term destruction.

professionals from top tech companies and social media platforms such as Facebook, Google, and Apple. In response to increasing pressure to address these issues, the CEOs of Google, Facebook, and Twitter were called to Congress to testify about their role in promoting disinformation and extremism online. While lawmakers on each side of the aisle focused on different concerns, they were united in their belief that self-regulation isn't working and it's time for Congress to step in.

A few highlights of the testimony follow:

"Your business model itself has become the problem," Rep. Frank Pallone Jr. (D-NJ) said in his opening remarks.

There was bipartisan agreement that Big Social's addictive design techniques and algorithmic harms are contributing to a growing public health crisis, similar to the one caused by Big Tobacco. Rep. Cathy McMorris Rodgers (R-WA) said: "Our kids - the users - are the product. You - Big Tech – are not advocates for children. You exploit and profit off them.

Rep. Kathy Castor (D-FL) asked the CEOs whether they had watched "The Social Dilemma," "where former employees of yours or other big tech platforms say they do not allow their kids on social media?" She cited a

In fairness, I suggest that before any farm tours of cannabis are allowed that we have tours instead of the thousands of acres now littered with abandoned hoop houses, garbage dumps, eroded hillsides, transient camps, miles of fortresslike fencing, and litter-strewn waterways. Only after a cleanup plan is in place to protect our investments, which will no doubt have to be paid for at taxpayers' expense, should a plan for farm tours of the not-trashed-out properties be allowed

County policy has allowed the destruction of our lands and our communities, and it has to be county action to clean it up. We need a cleanup - not an expansion at this time. From what we've seen so far the public overwhelmingly does not support this expansion plan, and if our leadership does not support what the public wants, then it is not a representative government, but tyranny.

I urge you all to flood the board of supervisors with your letters of opposition to this destructive expansion plan before the April 19 special meeting. It is critical that they hear from you now!

All about the Soroptimists

Local club reminds community about membership drive, 50th birthday, and phone book restock

For 50 years, the Soroptimist International of Willits club third Tuesday at noon, and the public is invited." has been supporting women and girls - since their charter date of April 3, 1971. The club looks to celebrate their birthday month with a membership drive.

"We are always looking for new members, and we welcome men as well as women," explained SIW's Vicki Ham. "We are a service club working to help women and girls in our community. We present scholarships and grants within the community, as well as aiding other service organizations within the community such as Kids Club, Friends of the Library, and more. As a no-guilt club, we will not ask you to do more than you feel you have time to do.

One of the biggest fundraisers for the club is the annual Community Telephone Directory. The 2021 book was printed and distributed initially on March 11, and a restock of directories was just completed at the Willits Library on Tuesday.

"Our community phone book is our major fundraiser, which we use to support our projects," explained Ham. "The book is free to the community as our funds for service come from our advertisers. The book is loved by many in Willits, and residents look forward to its yearly publication.'

Ham explained: "Soroptimist is an international organization of volunteers who work to improve the lives of women and girls through programs leading to social and economic empowerment. We are a global volunteer organization that economically empowers women and girls by providing access to education, the single most-effective anti-poverty intervention. Over 80,000 Soroptimists in 122 countries and territories contribute time and financial support to community-based and international projects that benefit women and girls."

If you are interested in joining the Soroptimists, they are currently meeting via Zoom and the link is available by contacting: siwillits@soroptimist.net or by contacting any member as listed in the Soroptimist Community Phonebook.

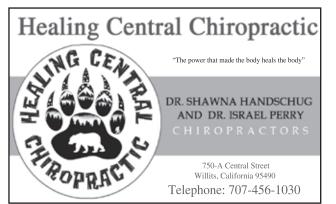

All of the advertisers on this page included their ads in the 2021 Soroptimist International of Willits Community Telephone Directory. They also chose to bundle their ads again to run in the paper alongside some Soroptimist content, further supporting the non-profit with their additional run. Thank you, advertisers!

The Eel River Recovery Project recently presented Eel Zoom on Friday afternoons at 5 pm from April 9 to May 28 on topics of interest about the Eel River watershed, including forest health, salmon-run trends, Sacramento pikeminnow management, how watersheds work, how flow has changed, salmon parks, toxic cyanobacteria and more. Presentations are made by various experts, but in a fun and playful way suited for the Friday at 5 pm "happy hour" timing of presentations.

Playful Taffy

Taffy has been with us since October, and after stays at both the Ukiah and Fort Bragg shelters, she is STILL looking for a home of her own. Taffy is a really sweet and playful girl once you gain her trust. She needs someone who will be patient and kind to her and give her space to come to them on her own terms. We think she could get along with another cat, but might do best in a home without young children or dogs. She has been warming up to us here at the shelter to showcase her goofy and affectionate side! She also absolutely adores playing with her toy mice. Like all good things. Taffy is worth the effort put in to building a lifelong bond. Do you think you might be interested in meeting this lovely girl?

The tables were far eatures Write nathew@willitsweekly.com enough apart to allow for plenty of room between the participants. It gave the Rotarians a sense of a return to normality and they were able to raise money for polio and their other altruistic causes through their regular routines.

Jeff Yokum, the guest speaker, gave a talk on positivity, complete with a happy dance with his daughter and Rotarian Andrew Hosford. Yokum then set up a couple car doors on platforms and invited the Rotarians up to beat on them with sledgehammers and other instruments of destruction, after which he offered a tour of the work area with explanations of how to properly repair and paint vehicles.

Jason Korte, president of the Willits Rotary, said that he would like to find venues where, for now, they could meet in situations that would allow for distancing. The Rotarians recently participated in senior interview nights at Willits High School, and are working on several other altruistic projects: senior scholarships, student debt assistance, a firehouse furniture fundraiser, a Noyo Theatre fundraiser, and others.

week, confirmed that it would probably cost more to fix the bad projector than to buy a new one.

Jeff and Lois are going to need to be resourceful and creative if and when they can get the theater opened again, as movies are not going to be able to pay all the expenses. Some of the innovations they have discussed are dedicating one of the smaller, 60-seat screening rooms at the theater to private parties and recreate it as a bar that shows films with a liquor license, for which they have applied. They are also considering utilizing a theater for internet gaming and / or meeting spaces.

"Dark Command," which will open the theater on May 4, is the same film that was showing on that date in 1940 when the Noyo first opened. The director, the legendary Raoul Walsh, actually had a home at Third Gate where, ironically, the Hoovers now live. Although the film is about the Civil War in Kansas, if one views the film closely, they can see instances of the plains of Kansas morphing into local mountains and trees as Walsh had the clout to bring the film company up to his home for a party / film shoot.

The theater is a place of history and stories. "A lady last week stopped me on the street," recounted Lois. "Back in the seventies,' she said 'when it was still one theater, I knew the projectionist. He was an alcoholic. We'd go to watch a film and suddenly there would be no film. We all knew that he had passed out in the projection room. We would just call out his name and he would wake up and get the film going again."

The Noyo is more than a theater. It is an institution deeply ingrained in the ethos of the community, a sight that all expect to see as they drive up Commercial Street. It would be a loss for the entire community if it was no longer able to operate. "Dark Command" is going to be a fundraiser for the theater, a pay-by-donation event. In addition, for all those who value this form of entertainment and wish to contribute to the ability of the Noyo Theatre to open and to remain in operation, there is a GoFundMe: www.gofundme. com/f/save-the-novo-theatre.

Ukiah's water system, Janet Pauli, with an On Monday, Deputy County Counsel update on the Potter Valley project, Beth Matthew Kiedrowski stated, "The primary Solomon from the Russian River Flood concern is while the county is undergoing Control District. permits and to operate within that system. The thing that unfortunately we quickly found out is that not everyone would respond favorably or appropriately to that incentive. And so there also needed to be a fairly robust enforcement action. We did that by rewriting our code to give a better process."

Ford said that their "success rates" have increased recently in terms of getting people to either eradicate illegal grows or come into some sort of compliance before strict enforcement measures are used.

"We're having a success rate probably in the 70 to 80% range between people who can just clean up without any kind of fines and penalties and people entering into compliance agreements," he said. "In fact in 2020 ... of all the notices that we issued they were all resolved without fines and penalties. So actually we think that's an accomplishment to be able to work with people and get things done." First District Supervisor Glenn McGourty seemed impressed by Ford's presentation. "I'm a proponent of active code enforcement," said McGourty. "If we don't > do something proactive here, then we're going to have a complete madhouse. And we already have Covelo which is a mess. and now we see Redwood Vallev and Potter Valley kind of falling in the same category ... of people who just obviously have no intention of following the rules.

"And we have to be able to send a message loud and clear that this isn't OK,' he continued. "And I think that Mendocino County's clear that we want to have a cannabis industry here, but we expect it to be a well-regulated and orderly cannabis industry that we can be kind of proud of in a way like any other agricultural product that we produce. Right now, no one can be proud of this, this is a mess. And we really have to do something about it because people are really really upset."

During public comments, Covelo Cannabis Advocacy Group director Monique Ramirez stated that first and foremost the county should put its efforts into having an efficient process for obtaining legal cannabis permits in the county.

> "The solution to all of this is to have a functioning cannabis program, and unless we have that we're going to have so many problems," said Ramirez. "And people are not going to be able to ever come forward. So as we deny people that have initiated the process ... and don't help them, they're just going to return to the illegal market, which further perpetuates the problem for making it even harder for code enforcement and law enforcement... We need to look at why people are having such troubles being able to get in the

What's New at KLLG Radio

By Earlene Gleisner, for KLLG

On Mondays at 4 pm and Thursdays at 5 pm, Willits Smooth Lounge is hosted by a persona "Ashton Greene" and his son, sometimes known as "Richy Rich Goldwater." It is easy listening with that kind of rock that is great for kicking back and opening up something fine from the vine.

A message from Michael Foley: "To the faithful audience of 'News 'n Views,' I am taking a brief break from the show to pursue the work on the farm. Look for 'News 'n Views' in a month or so. My best and thanks for listening!"

Kyle Neuer is new to Willits and has joined KLLG in response to our call for some engineering help. Having worked on another radio station for 15 years, he will be bringing on a new music program and assisting us with one of the engineering posts we have available.

More businesses are using our broadcasts to announce their reopenings and services through our Community Bulletin Board feature. Earlene Gleisner, a volunteer, will be doing the footwork to see how KLLG can help you with your advertising scheme.

We are still looking for volunteers with a good knowledge of Windows file structure and who are willing to learn how RadioDJ software works. Please consider contacting Jeff Shipp through our website, www.kllg.org. Through our site, you can also access our link for public service announcements, the donation button, underwriting schedule, as well as emailing us any of your suggestions.

It is the hope of Rodriguez that their fall season can approach normalcy, where they are able to field the full complement of 300 to 320 players, with each team being sponsored by local businesses. Willits lost the chance to see the traditional parade of teams last year, a joyous event that brings up to a thousand people to the main soccer field by Roots of Motive Power.

"Here we are just starting the spring v season, and already we're getting prepared for the fall season," Rodriguez explained. "I just put in an equipment order for that season. I'm working on the website, getting everything ready. I'm getting a lot of inquiries from parents who didn't know there was going to be a spring program. I reassure them that the fall season starts August 1 and it's right around the corner. The registration period will be from May 15 to June 30."
