What happened to civility?

To the Editor:

It is expected that people will have different views on issues like the bypass, but can't we remain respectful? Differences come out in debate as part of the democratic process.

The dominant issue at present isn't the bypass but how as a community we deal with our different values. When civility is abandoned, and debate falls to the level of personal attacks, I feel quite despondent. I hope we can show more respect for those we live among.

And why single out one individual when there are over 4,000 in our county who signed petitions supporting an optional bypass with fewer construction inconveniences for the public? Regarding Mary's recent letter, it was only one in a series of dozens to our town papers voicing an opinion. Surely we can do better. Rather than imagine all matter of dreadful things about one another, we can take a more courageous and beneficial tack and explore what motivates us to project what could be our own disturbed world upon others.

William White, Willits

Priorities

To the Editor:

Teachers in the Willits Unified School District begin the year with great expectations for a solid year of student learning, growth and dreams fulfilled. Teachers have spent many days without pay this summer moving and cleaning classrooms, attending workshops, studying curriculum, and setting up for a new group of young scholars. We do this because we love our jobs, our students and our community.

We all know the financial strain put on the district due to the bond situation. To add to those problems, the Willits school board has increased the salary (with fewer days worked) for the new superintendent, increased the salary of the business manager by 10 percent, and increased the salary and work days for several administrators. After cutting an administrator to save money, they turned around and hired an administrator for that same position – although giving it a new title. Six teaching positions were cut, and many fine, young teachers went elsewhere looking for employment.

While this type of spending went on, the district has increased class sizes throughout the district. K-3 classes have between 30 percent and 50 percent more students than last year. Overcrowding at all grade levels is sadly too apparent.

The district and the teachers are at impasse in negotiations, because the district wants to cut 5 days again from the students' opportunity for education, along with other additional cuts to teachers and support staff. Examples of this type of prioritizing are disheartening. We hope that the community can tell the current school board members to get their priorities right. We are stuck with the bond fiasco for many years, but we don't need to take it out on our students, teachers and support staff. Please contact the superintendent and school board members to tell them that what affects our classrooms should be the highest priority.

Paula Nunez, Willits Teachers Association

'It's gonna happen'

To the Editor:

If anyone could step up and out-windbag Lanny Cotler's call for turning the Willits Bypass into a national issue, it is our City Councilman Ron Orenstein in last week's Willits Weekly.

Ron Orenstein – who publically declared the Flatiron and Caltrans representatives, who have degraded Willits into a construction zone, to be "gentlemen," with whom he is glad to bargain, incidentally from a position of powerlessness, because he has no more respect for the applicable requirements of the bypass Environmental Impact Report than they do – to use haul roads, not the Willits streets, for their filthy deed.

It is plain that they have no more respect for him than they – and he – do for the lungs of Willits residents, who will breathe in 90,000 tons of carbon poison and dust during the next six years and more, while all this invasive transport is happening.

Ron Orenstein – who talks like apathy and ignorance are noble virtues, monopolized of course by the unidentified "majority" of citizens, knowing by higher knowledge, "it's gonna happen, so there is no need to make any noise about it."

Personally, I suspect the citizens actually sorrow that they have been overrun, along with the reasons they moved and continue to live here – a human scale of life and value, surrounded by stable Nature.

Why wasn't Elder Orenstein leading us 25 years ago when not one citizen of Willits spoke to Caltrans salesmen in favor of a gargantuan freeway through this lovely valley, the last disturbed alluvial valley in California, rich with wildlife and peace, and filled with the artifacts of a past civilization that lasted 10,000 years?

Because if he had been leading us then, we could have cut out the minor details (i.e., public democracy, caution and resistance) and just eliminated 15 to 20 percent of Willits economically right away, instead of waiting until now – followed by the creation of commercial franchise zones at either interchange, so as to destroy Willits permanently as an integrated local economic entity.

Which is what is going to happen now, as soon as the structure is finished – and is why dead-end stub roads on the Caltrans map are strategically placed at the interchanges for new corporate development, absolutely none of it local.

Such wisdom, such sound sense, such vision and plain talk.

"It's gonna happen." The abandonment of responsibility. Abdicate, abscquatulate, eviscerate, pontificate. Extremists on the right, extremists on the left, and thank God there is Ronnie, by some miracle smack dab in the center, rolling over for Caltrans.

With his obeisance and Bruce Burton's whining he wants his town back, and the City Council's evacuation of its primary responsibilities to protect the health and welfare of its own, Flatiron now can – legally – use the Willits city streets to accelerate the demise of our business community.

while simultaneously destroying the implicit peace of the watershed, represented by the Little Lake Valley.

And if, while we're waiting, 25 percent of the greater Willits driving population, that used the East Valley roads for convenience and basic necessity, are suddenly and arbitrarily funneled into the bottleneck produced by Caltrans 20 years ago, don't be impolite about it, serve some barbequed hippie.

It will go on in the same general outline, for years, Commercial Street, Valley Street, Shell Lane – meaning Baechtel Road – and East Hill Road, all these despite city streets being disavowed for use in the EIR, which Caltrans swore by, and is legally responsible for, but ignored while sweet-talking Ronnie and his swooning ilk.

From my perspective and conversations, the people are by and large confused, unsure, afraid to object. They have been conditioned to go along since childhood by just such double-talking authorities. There might be a personal penalty for standing up as a citizen. So they mourn to themselves that their lives and surroundings have been overturned.

But that damaging passivity is a plus to Ron Orenstein. No biggie. "It's gonna happen."

So right off-hand, I'd say his playing the lackey to large governmental and corporate entities, who have nothing but profit on their minds and contempt in their hearts, not least for him, is a loser's game. All the gassy op-eds in the world won't change that.

Many, very many, who have sunk their roots here in Willits don't care to lose the way we live, the economy we make together, and – to this point – the unviolated land to which we owe a common sense of goodness, serenity and peace. We will continue to oppose what Ronnie bows and scrapes to welcome.

William Ray, Willits

Identity crisis

To the Editor:

Like so many other small town in the United States, Willits is going through an identity crisis. Recently, we have become the highlight of news stories about the bypass or marijuana, but we have so much more to offer.

With the bypass completion in the near future (I say near because the estimated five-year completion will be here before we know it), we must be prepared.

Chamber of Commerce representatives and I have talked with many of our active members about how we can combat the perceived negative impact the bypass might bring on business and our town. During these discussions we have determined Willits needs an identity: a branding, if you will. We must give the traveling public a reason to stop, stay and enjoy our town. We must also give our residents a reason to be proud of our heritage and our future.

We must capitalize on our heritage, not our recent heritage as some have suggested, but our heritage that is historic on levels that have spanned generations. Five basic themes have been the most favored: ranching or Western, Victorian, logging or rustic wood, railroad, and vintage Willits. With architecture, paint schemes and fascias that reflect these themes, we could establish an identity that not only will entice tourists and vacationers to stop and stay in Willits (instead of driving through), it will give our residents a reason to be proud of where they live, work and play.

I give an example of a small town in central Washington. Leavenworth was a town dying in front of itself following the loss of the railroad and logging industries. They made the brave decision to completely reinvent the town to resemble a Bavarian village in the central mountains of Washington. Today it is a bustling and prosperous small town that attracts nearly 2 million visitors each year. They accomplished this with a population of fewer than 2,000.

We ask that the Willits City Council team with the merchants, businesses and Chamber of Commerce to develop criteria that will assist in establishing building guidelines that will direct building owners and occupants, when they make changes to paint schemes, fascias and buildings, to adhere to a set of guidelines. We believe the guidelines must be themed in these five ways: ranching or Western, Victorian, logging or rustic wood, railroad and vintage Willits. If other towns such as Leavenworth can make themselves strong, so can Willits.

Obviously, we must do more, such as bring small industry to town. What we suggest is just one part of a complex plan we must complete. There is no margin for failure here. We either work to become active and prosperous, or we become just another gasoline stop off Highway 101, with no soul.

Ron Moorhead, president, Willits Chamber of Commerce

Fears and animosities

To the Editor:

I'm concerned about the well-being of our community. I'm particularly concerned about what's happening to our community as we attempt to work with Caltrans on the bypass project. Sometimes I feel Willits is like a flea trying to have a dialogue with an elephant, as we constantly worry about being stepped on. The Caltrans annual budget is approximately $14 billion, and they have over 22,000 permanent employees. Our local resources are much more limited. I hope all of us can stand together as a community to express our needs and stand up to Caltrans without being squashed.

But as concerned as I am about our efforts to meet local needs as we work out an agreement with Caltrans, I'm even more concerned about how we are treating each other. The bypass project has triggered fears and animosities that are in danger of tearing our community apart. Abraham Lincoln reminded us that "A house divided against itself cannot stand." I call on all citizens of our community to reach out to each other, with care and respect for those we may disagree with, as we seek solutions to our local problems. As the poet Rumi said: "Out beyond ideas of right-doing and wrong-doing, there is a field. I'll meet you there."

Jed Diamond, Willits

Sorry, no majority

To the Editor:

A few weeks ago a letter appeared in the Willits News under the heading "We Are the Majority" and signed by 22 people claiming that the majority of Willits residents approve of the Caltrans bypass.

How they figured that 22 people constitutes a majority is a mystery. Perhaps they don't understand the definition of a majority. I knew immediately that they were wrong, but if no one disputed their claim, it would stand. That, I could not allow.

I asked for and received copies of the collected SOLLV petitions opposing the

the Willits Charter School Director

By John Kirchiro

It is with excitement and anticipation that I welcome everyone back for our 2013/2014 school year and our 15th year in operation.

Willits Charter School has always been committed to providing our students with a unique and rigorous education in a relaxed, family-oriented atmosphere, and I look forward to continuing this effort in the coming school year. I believe that, by fostering collaborative relationships based on empathy and clear communication between staff, students and families, we will continue to meet the academic and social needs of our students, setting them on a path of lifelong learning and unlimited possibilities.

Students attending Willits Charter School study more than the core academic subjects required for graduation. Students also learn the crucial interpersonal skills needed to work together to create the school of their dreams. Willits Charter School is a place where relationships are important and everyone deserves to be treated with kindness and respect. This commitment to teaching the whole child is an essential component in creating a fun, safe and stimulating learning environment for everyone. At Willits Charter School, we value academic excellence, social consciousness and personal growth.

There are many things that set WCS apart: among these is our "Friday Academy." Every quarter, students pick three electives from the four categories of physical education/movement, liberal arts, science/math, and arts/life skills. Each quarter the offerings change, and students select new classes. These classes have ranged from Garden Art to Circus Arts, and Practical Life Skills to Wilderness Survival. Our first-quarter offerings are still being lined up but will include; Archery, Guitar, Intro to Culinary Arts, Classic Cinema, Advanced Art, Creative Writing, Drumming, Yoga, Ballet, Knitting, Novel Writing and much more!

Willits Charter School is a living, breathing institution. We are continually growing, changing and reimagining ourselves to become the best school we can be, adapting and changing to meet the diverse demands of our students, families and our community. I'm happy to say that the changes coming this year are changes we can all look forward to. We have re-designed our math program to better serve the diverse needs of our student body. We continue to expand our WCS Mini-Farm, which will include rabbits, chickens and dwarf goats in the near future. Our Culinary Arts program will expand to cover advanced Culinary Arts and Kitchen Management. We also have a number of new staff joining us this year to bring their enthusiasm and fresh ideas to our school.

I would like to thank all of the teachers, board members, parents and students who have worked so hard to get the school ready for our first day of school on Tuesday, September 3. We could not do what we do without the generous efforts of our WCS family!

WCS is fully accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges for both middle school and high school grades. Please remember that Willits Charter School is a free public school that does not charge tuition. Grades are filling up fast, but there are still several openings in our middle school grades as well as spots in our high school grades and independent study program.

by Kara McClellan

Willits Elementary Charter School, located on the corner of Lenore and Commercial, will welcome new and returning students on September 3 at 8:30 am. We are delighted to start our second year so ready to learn and grow. We look forward to continuing to build a strong academic program for our students. Our focus this year is on core skills and also the 21st Century Learning Skills: "Critical Thinking, Communication, Collaboration, and Creativity."

In particular, we look forward to continuing to improve how we structure children's days to address their individual strengths and needs, and expanding our students' opportunities to participate in meaningful inquiries. Students love the opportunity to play an active role in their own learning. Over the course of our first year, our teachers became skilled at guiding inquiries to both deeply examine questions while also meeting Common Core standards.

One of our most exciting plans to reach our goals for this coming year is based in our garden. With help from a local expert, each class will participate in a series of student-centered, inquiry-based garden projects. These hands-on lessons will both push students to think creatively and use their problem-solving skills. All the activities are based on Common Core standards, which we have already implemented school-wide.

In his recent book, "Creating Innovators," author Tony Wagner states: "Play, passion, and purpose: These are the forces that drive young innovators." Over the last year, we have found that the most impactful lessons are those that students have helped to create and that are guided by their questions. We will continue to find ways to tap into that passion, which leads to such a vibrant school community.

Kindergarten teacher Ashley Sherf notes: "Learning naturally occurs when children are engaged in their environment. Questions about surroundings frequently arise, and these inquiries offer chances to further explore concepts. Teachers are able to guide children to understand science, math and language while students explore their world. Children not only retain information better than when I use traditional teaching techniques but also learn how to learn."

Our goal each year is to give students the tools to develop integrity, compassion and confidence through inquiry-based learning. We look forward to continuing the La Vida Charter School Director

By Ann Kelly

La Vida Charter School's all-school theme for this coming school year is "The Abundance of Life's Diversity." Students will explore biodiversity, neurodiversity and multiculturalism in their activities and classes on the beautiful Ridgewood Ranch. La Vida is continuing to deepen our Sustainable Technology curriculum with the "Plant 5! Grow Dirt!" program. In this program, students will work in the Butler Cherry Project Orchard throughout the year, learning about trees and different composting methods. Also in the Sustainable Tech classes, students will learn about permaculture and electricity. Students will make their own solar panels from scratch, with Mike Burgess and Andrew Miller during the section on electricity.

La Vida is offering a new abundance of classes and collaborating with community members to provide rich, educational opportunities for our students. Nearly 40 high school courses will be offered, in industrial sectors such as Health Science, Forensics, Hospitality, Tourism, Information Technology and Business Management, with more coming soon. La Vida is partnering with Odysseyware to offer online coursework combined with personalized teacher engagement.

Students can also learn skills such as utilizing broadcasting equipment and producing programming content in La Vida's Digital Literacies Video Class. La Vida is happily partnering with Jason Killelea and Mendocino Access TV for this class.

This year, in the high school art department, classes include Ceramics with John Rule, Personal Fashion with Cynthia Raiser Jeavons, and Social Dancing with Eddie Vedolla. La Vida is also excited to be collaborating with Jenny Peterman of Repose in Action/Ukiah Players Theater. Working together with Jenny, the high school students will create an original production, including music and dance. This will be performed during the school's Thankfulness Feast this fall.

In the spirit of the new Common Core state standards, high school on-site classes will integrate Science and Language Arts together in the fall, and Social Studies and Language Arts together in the winter. The school is piloting a Common Core math curriculum from Carnegie Learning, which offers a blended approach of using textbooks with the very successful online Cognitive Tutor. La Vida is also shifting to Integrated Math (which is also described as International Math), in which Algebra and Geometry units are sequenced together for at least two years instead of separated into distinct courses as traditionally done.

La Vida also has a child-centered elementary school program, which meets two days a week. The rich curriculum includes a Waldorf-inspired main lesson and specialty classes, such as music, art, Spanish, science, movement, drama and handwork. Those wishing to enroll at this K-12 school are encouraged to call 459-6344 or visit lavidaschool.org for more information.

‘Two Across’ opens at WCT next weekend

Two strangers, a man and a woman, meet on a BART train at 4:30 in the morning. Both are doing the New York Times crossword. This is the opening gambit for “Two Across,” which opens Friday, September 13 at the Willits Community Theatre.

Written by Jerry Mayer and directed by Dick Graham, the play stars Keith Canova as a charming unemployed flake who thinks nothing of asking for puzzle help, and Kathy de Bane as a troubled but highly organized, rule-abiding psychologist who considers asking for puzzle help a major character weakness.

Very quickly it becomes obvious that each is the kind of person the other has always tried to avoid, but now fate has thrust them together, struggling to find solutions to life’s puzzles as their BART train romance moves through the early morning darkness.

Both actors in this play have appeared in many local productions. Keith Canova has been in productions as varied as “Psycho Beach Party,” “Little Shop of Horrors,” and “Hamlet.” Kathy de Bane has appeared in “Lend me a Tenor,” “My Three Angels” and “Alone Together.”

Opening weekend for “Two Across” is Friday, September 13 and Saturday, September 14, and the play runs Thursdays through Sundays for the next two weeks, closing on Sunday, September 29. The winning ticket for the WCT “Grand Prize” raffle will be drawn at the closing performance.

Advance tickets are available at Goods’ Shoppe or by calling WCT at 459-0895 and reserving seats with a credit card.

“National Jury Rights Day”

Info: 459-6362.

She is a passionate person and the main thrust of her work is to encourage herself and others to experience life more fully.

“Walking, writing, painting, singing, dancing, gardening – whatever it is that takes us to our source, we’d better go,” she writes. An open reading will follow. Info: Mike A’Dair at 459-1576.

“Find out what happens when a nouveau riche couple get exactly what they want, then what they deserve. Bask in the absurd hilarity that ensues when a crass American, a militant Israeli, a British tart and a Mexican peace activist are stuck together in a shed awaiting the Socialist Zombie apocalypse. How could a club girl summon two makeover artist devils while sneaking into the men’s room? What happens when she barters her soul for a life with Bradley Cooper? Can they even DO that? Does a legless man without a tongue get to have his final wish of watching the sunset in his homeland? First he has to get past two checkpoint guards. Does he succeed?” Info: 456-0152.

Brookside, instead of moving on to Blosser Lane Elementary School. "The third grade is a pretty big class," O'Neill said. Back to School night at Brookside is September 12.

"Enrollment is way up at Blosser Lane," said Tawny Fernandez, principal of Blosser Lane, "and classrooms are full." Fernandez is also principal this year for Willits' alternative schools, including Sherwood Elementary School, and she says "enrollment looks good at Sherwood, too," where Kindergarten is full. "It's been a great kickoff to the beginning of the year," Fernandez said. "The kids are happy, and the kids are coming to school." Back to School night at Blosser Lane is September 21 and at Sherwood, it's September 17.

Kara McClellan, director at the Willits Elementary Charter School, says they have "a huge waiting list for Kindergarten." Many of the other grade levels are currently full, too, she said, except fourth grade, which has a number of openings. WECS, which starts school next week on September 3, is still accepting applications for all grades, McClellan said, in anticipation of some new openings in other grades, too.

"We're really excited about the start of school and our staff," McClellan said. "We've assembled such a magnificent group of folks, our old team back again, and a few new faces."

Tatiana Cantrell at Learning Roots Pre-School and Childcare in Willits says her school also almost full, with only a couple of part-time slots open right now. "They're saying everybody's moving out of the area – and enrollment was declining a bit every year," she said, "I'm on a couple of site councils for the local schools – and all of sudden there's all these kids here." Cantrell also coaches with Willits Youth Soccer, and said there's many younger kids getting involved in soccer this year.

Budget

Revenue from property taxes has remained almost perfectly flat since 2008-2009, rising from $27.3 million in that fiscal year to $28.16 million in 2010-2011, and then falling to $28.07 million in 2011-2012. Property tax revenue for the past two years has remained at $28 million, and is predicted to rise only slightly over the next three years.

Those revenues make up almost half of the county's total annual discretionary budget – the money available for supervisors to spend.

steams it up with festival this weekend

The Roots of Motive Power crew will be steaming up for their major event of the year, the Roots of Motive Power Festival, on Saturday, September 7 and Sunday, September 8 at the Roots facility on Commercial Street.

"We try to run every piece of steam equipment that we have that is operable," said Chris Baldo of Willits Redwood Company, a longtime Roots stalwart. "Steam tractors, steam shovel, steam roller, crane, there's a lot."

The Roots festival will take place the same weekend as the Kinetic Carnivale, giving steampunk fans the opportunity to experience the real steam deal.

Last year's Kinetic Carnivale attendees thoroughly appreciated learning about steam engines – and costumed revelers enjoyed posing in front of the massive machines and locomotives from days gone by.

Roots will be offering free train rides around the tracks with the Mason County No. 7 steam locomotive again this year. "We have a new diesel locomotive that we operated for the first time a week ago," Baldo said, "and that will be going around the tracks too."

The 20-ton Whitcomb locomotive was built in 1941 by the Whitcomb Locomotive Works, and was last operated for Boise Cascade in Steilacoom, Washington.

In addition to the steam-up, the Early Day Gas Engine Society will set up their gas engine "contraptions" again this year at the Rec Grove, and Saturday afternoon features the annual Roots Appreciation BBQ at 4 pm.

Mendocino County's government remains stagnant, while costs are rising and long deferred bills are coming due.

This has brought the county to a place where, as poet Robert Frost wrote, "two roads diverged in a yellow wood." On the one hand, the county could have decided to restore employee wage concessions and even give county workers a raise. On the other hand, the county is faced with deteriorating infrastructure: obsolete technology, leaky roofs, aging equipment and an uncertain future with its retirement fund.

This year the county decided to focus on infrastructure.

For the first time since 2006, Mendocino County has invested a sizable portion of its budget on capital improvements. It also has eliminated some costly fiscal maneuvers, such as borrowing low-interest money during the summer to fund governmental activities during cash-lean months.

The county also has gone a long way toward paying off its Teeter fund debt, and has paid off the debt incurred to implement its emergency communications system. At the same time, it has increased its general reserve fund to more than $7 million, the most money ever held in that fund.

This approach is opposed by a number of county employees who attended the meeting. The disgruntled workers have formed a group, Mend Mendocino, which held a canned food drive prior to Tuesday's meeting.

Sandi Madrigal-Crawford, an employee with SEIU Local 1021, the labor union for the majority of county employees, summed up county employees' position:

"We haven't had a raise since 2007," Madrigal-Crawford said. "We've given back and given back and given back, for years. We are working for 2007 wages, and meanwhile it's 2013. Our healthcare costs have gone up 15 percent, and a lot of us can't make it anymore. It's like, we are the working poor."

"And the thing of it is, these are county jobs – the best jobs in the county. So what does it mean when the workers who have the best jobs in the county can barely survive, and some of us can't survive? That means things aren't right."

Despite an able presentation by county Assistant CEO Kyle Knopp, who touted the county's achievements in the face of a difficult economic environment, many audience members asked about the one thing the county seems to have overlooked: "What about investing in people?" "Why are employees' salaries not mentioned?" "Why are new and older county employees leaving the county to find work elsewhere?"

"What would have been the cost to the county if it had accepted the union's offer?" asked county employee Dave Eberly, president of SEIU Local 1021.

"If the discretionary part of the county budget is $57 million, then five percent of that would be about $2.8 million," said Second District Supervisor John McCowen.

"Really, I feel that discussion of that point is much more suited to the negotiating table," Knopp said, "and I don't want to talk about it here."

before he arrived with his camera and was arrested.

Eberhard was booked at county jail on suspicion of trespassing with a $5,000 bail, booking records stated.

Eberhard donates his work regularly to The Willits News, photographing bypass construction and other events around town.

Several MediaNews Group newspapers republished versions of an editorial that appeared in The Willits News concerning Eberhard's arrest.

From the beginning of bypass work and protests, Nomad Films videographer Tony Ellis has been assembling footage for a documentary. "Our First Amendment rights have been stomped all over," Ellis claims.

"I have watched [Eberhard] get turned away over and over again," he added, noting he has almost 30 videos of Eberhard being asked to leave the freeway right of way.

"I take photos for the community," Eberhard said. "I have a right to go out there, and I try to go along with the regulations Caltrans has put on us."

Eberhard said an officer was about to read him an order to leave state property. "I was going to leave like I always have before," Eberhard said. "I have been doing that for five months."

But he never got the chance: As the CHP officer searched his cell phone for the text of the order he would read, another officer began to handcuff Eberhard, the photographer said.

Deputy District Attorney Matthew Hubley appeared in court for the DA's Office Friday morning to make it official: a case would not be filed.

Eberhard noted the CHP said he can now phone CHP dispatchers, who will contact officers on bypass duty to tell them he will be out taking photographs.

Mendocino Forest Products owns the source of the fill, a vacant sawmill north of Willits, north of where the railroad tracks cross Highway 101 and south of Outlet Creek.

In an August 28 letter to Mendocino Forest Products, Mendocino County's chief building inspector, Chris Warwick, writes: "It has come to my attention that permit BU-2013-0452 for the proposed grading located at 25500 Highway 101 was issued in error.... Therefore, I am revoking permit BU-2013-0452 and ordering all work to STOP."

She has represented citizen's groups and environmental groups that include the Audubon Society, Bodega Bay Concerned Citizens, San Joaquin Raptor Rescue Center, Santa Monica Baykeeper, Sierra Club and the Surfrider Foundation.

"My client is not happy with what the county did," said Jim King, attorney for Mendocino Forest Products, in the courtroom Wednesday. "The work has stopped."

King said that the soil was tested at the site of the excavation and that surveys conducted for the Northern Spotted Owl, raptors and song birds detected nothing.

The Willits Environmental Center and Keep the Code, an area group formed to oppose the Harris Quarry expansion project, filed papers Friday with Mendocino County Superior Court to ask for a temporary restraining order against the dirt moving.

Keep the Code and the Environmental Center asked for the county to comply with CEQA and SMARA, court documents stated.

Due to the county's Wednesday decision to rescind its grading permit, no action was taken by the judge.

In an e-mail Wednesday afternoon, Save Our Little

Lake Valley announced they'd be turning an 8 am rally Thursday into a celebration of the work stoppage.

Zoia, according to her website, works cases that challenge project approvals and related environmental documents like Environmental Impact Reports and violations of CEQA.

Other requirements include completion of mitigation site preparation by October 1; complete revisions of Mitigation and Monitoring Plan chapters "that have not met, or are likely to not meet" deadlines in the plan by October 1; complete the study and final report on "baseline conditions" dealing with target species in the rehabilitation parcels by October 1; and "select treatment types and final mitigation plan designs for the rehabilitation parcels by October 15."

The Army Corps "considers non-compliance with the permit ... may result in permit suspension, revocation or administrative penalties."

Caltrans responded in a statement: "We are committed to the 2,000 acres of mitigation and other efforts to protect and enhance the environment in the Little Lake Valley. We are working closely with the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers and are taking all requested steps to accomplish compliance with our permit."

Caltrans bypass. It was a statewide petition, but I had a hunch a lot of Willits residents' names would be found there. I was right. After a week of carefully analyzing 2,799 handwritten entries, I culled 1,481 names of verifiable Willits residents on record as opposed to the bypass. I also documented 83 Willits businesses that oppose the bypass.

I won't claim a majority – I actually understand the definition of the word. What I will claim is the obvious: 1,481 Willits residents on our side is a lot more than the 22 Willits residents on their side.

There were actually many more names, but since there was no way to verify Willits residency on many, I had to leave them off. To those people, I apologize. You cared enough to put your name on the petition, and I appreciate you for it.

To the people whose names included enough information for validation: Thank you! You made a tough job much easier.

To the folks on the Brooktrails Board of Directors who recently rejected the notion that about 60 people who showed up at a meeting represented Brooktrails: fully 50 percent of the Willits addresses I documented are in Brooktrails. Until you can produce at least 700 names of people who take your position of approving of the bypass, your claims of representing a majority of Brooktrails residents are spurious and unfounded.

To the folks who signed the "majority" letter: I was careful that at least one method of validating Willits residency was included in each record I created. You can no longer claim a majority – not unless you circulate your own petition. I encourage you to do so, but you'll need to validate more than our 1,481 names of Willits residents: 22 names isn't going to get it.
