Mental health center

at old hospital site?

Kate Maxwell Reporter kate@willitsweekly.com

Ortner Management Group has officially signaled its "serious intent" to finalize negotiations to lease parts of the old Howard Hospital building for a mental health rehabilitation or crisis residential center. The proposed center would open in summer or fall of 2015.

The news comes from Margie Handley, Frank R. Howard Foundation president, and brings Willits one step closer to becoming the home of Mendocino County's only licensed mental health rehabilitation or crisis residential center.

The idea for such a center first surfaced in 2010 as a possibility for the building.

What follows is a condensed rendering of what was said at the Question: What experience do you have that qualifies you to be a good Third District supervisor?

Woodhouse: My wife Carlyn and I moved to Willits when we were quite young. We both grew up here and raised our children, Noel and Whitney, and that actually did help me grow up

Being in business, I was learning to survive financially and run a budget; it was very difficult. I helped hundreds their most frightening part of their life our restoration economy, with thriving buying houses and property and being right on the edge financially so without knowing it, I learned guite a bit from observing other people and asking questions. It's made me a more conservative person.

I've been a lifelong registered Democrat and voted in every election that I could.

Madrigal: I grew up here, went to school here, moved away, got my education in business management and economics from the University of California at Santa Cruz, and then came home. When my husband and I moved back, I really decided we wanted to dig in and participate.

I am a big supporter of local business and I've done a great deal of work here to support our business community. There are a number of changes coming up right now that are immediately impacting our business community, such as the Willits bypass. So making sure our business community has support at the county is critically important to me. Effective broadband access is a key salmon streams and sustainable forestry. We have a lot of assets here we can better promote.

Question: What can the board of supervisors do to develop and implement a comprehensive water strategy for the county?

Madrigal: This has been a big subject of mine. We here at the City of Willits have been put forward as sort of banner-bearers in terms of response to the drought issue. City Manager Adrienne Moore and I were invited to Sacramento to speak at a state senate hearing on our response to drought, and I continue to work our county Drought Ad-hoc Committee with supervisors Brown and Hamburg to come up with solutions. The key is to not forget about this [problem] today, now that we have gotten three-tenths of an inch [of rain]. There's a number of things we can be doing at the county. I have to say the county doesn't really have a comprehensive water policy at this point. They had a water agency; it was defunded. That's one of the things I'm

> City Hall asked its sales tax consultant to examine Cloverdale, Lincoln and Sebastopol as towns that have been bypassed by a highway, in addition to factoring in a small percentage of tax recession.

The consultant's figures have not yet been submitted to the city. "They are forming projections to address bypass impacts as well as recession," said Moore.

A Highway 101 bypass around Willits is now about 50 percent complete, according to the California Department of Transportation.

Mayor Madrigal and Councilman Orenstein disagreed about what that means for the city's income from gas stations.

Madrigal said completion of the bypass will have an impact on Willits gas stations.

Orenstein acknowledged unknown. "We are all guessing," he said. "Personally I do not expect it is going to be much of an impact."

Willits Art Center manager Bill Barksdale attended the meeting, and Councilwoman Madge Strong had a seat in the corner.

At the close of the meeting, Barksdale and Orenstein traded ideas on the topic of debt service.

"I think what taxpayers are concerned about is debt service," Barksdale said. "It is a big deal."

Barksdale is also head of the county Property Tax Assessment Appeals Board.

Educating Voters

To the Editor:

I would like to thank the Mendocino Women's Political Coalition and Willits

Weekly for sponsoring the Voters Education Forum that was held October 15 at Willits City Hall, and thank Joe Oslund for being the moderator. Third District supervisor candidates Holly Madrigal and Tom Woodhouse and county superintendent of schools candidate Warren Galletti answered some very tough questions.

What about the judges on the ballot? Go to http://judgepedia.org/California judicial elections, 2014 to find information about the California judicial candidates on your November 4 ballot. The governor appoints the judges, and you vote to retain them. Does that judge represent your values?

When does your vote get counted? If you have a mail-in ballot and drop it off at the polls, your ballot will not be counted on Election Day, and will not be part of the initial results announced that night. Each mail-in ballot has to be checked for your signature at the county office, and ballots dropped off at the polls begin to be counted on the Thursday after the election. By law the county can take up to 28 days to certify the election and announce final results. although in recent years, the elections office has been completing this task in a couple of weeks. If you want your vote to be included in results announced on Election Day, mail your ballot in early, no later than Thursday, October 30.

Your signature on your ballot should be exactly like your signature on your voter registration card. Look to see how your name is on your sample ballot or your mailin ballot that was sent to you. Is it your full name? Sign your name exactly as it was community service supervisor. sent to you.

How do you know if your ballot has been received?

If you are a vote by mail voter, you can check to see if your ballot has been received on the county's website, on the Elections page: www.co.mendocino.ca.us/ acr/elections.htm. On that page, click "Vote By Mail (Absentee) Status." A form will open, where you can fill in your information and search to see if your ballot has been received.

How to follow election results?

You can follow election results on the county website, too. On the Elections page, select "Current Election Results." The first results will be released after the polls close at 8 pm, and results are usually updated - as ballots come in from polling places until about 2 am. Don't be confused by the "100% reporting" line that will appear later in the night: that just means ballots cast on Election Day from each of our district's 247 precincts have been reported, not that all votes have been counted. Up to 40 percent of the vote in Mendocino County is not reported until the final, certified elections results are reported.

Tom Woodhouse and Holly Madrigal are competing in what promises to be another close battle for Third District supervisor of Mendocino County. Both candidates have been involved in this community for years, Holly as a member of Willits City Council and Tom as a tireless behind-thescenes volunteer in the schools, at the Senior Center, at City Council and Caltrans meetings, and as a Sheriff's Department

Tom has also worked independently with local youth to instill in them a sense of community. He has organized community cleanups, as well as spent untold hours weed-eating and cleaning up our city streets by himself. He is an honest and hard-working business man and family

Our sample ballots arrived in the mail last week - reminding me how important the upcoming election is for Third District supervisor. I had the pleasure of serving on an oversight board with Tom Woodhouse for a few years and had the opportunity to see him as chairman, in action. Tom has the uncanny ability to sit quietly and listen to all sides of an issue and then mitigate the parties to a decision that benefits

Our community is rich in diversity and often issues arise with folks emotionally heated on both sides. It is important to make certain our representative considers all of our points of view and how those decisions will impact each of us in this community. I believe Tom Woodhouse is the only candidate that meets this important

Tom and his family have lived and worked in our community for decades. His business experience, philanthropic experience and leadership qualities are unequaled. He is supported by our Sheriff Tom Allman, who understands the value that Tom Woodhouse will bring to the Board of Supervisors.

I have known Holly since she was small and have watched her grow up in our community, go away to college, and return home to make a difference. She cares deeply about our local schools. She is always willing to pitch in when I need her

Last year she was willing to be a judge for the high school Cooking Club's Cupcake Wars; she has also joined the elementary school kids on "Walk to School Day." All I have to do is ask, and Holly is willing to donate her time.

It has been a pleasure watching Holly grow into a leader for our community. She has put in the time to learn the complex subjects needed to serve our local government. I look forward to supporting her with my vote for our 3rd District supervisor.

I learned to look forward to the time when I needed to have my car serviced, because Leonard had such a great sense of humor and easy manner.

Aside from giving my car a thorough goingover and even washing it, he charged so little for a job well done. He really cared about my car, and so I learned to care more about it too. (Just as his wife, Grace, cared about her garden at their house/shop, and how Grace and Leonard cared about each

I knew their lives were not always easy - but then whose lives are easy? Yet Leonard would still greet you with a joke and a smile and a way to laugh about it all. What a great way to go through life. Thank you, Leonard, for enriching our lives and the lives of so many in this community. You wineries have begun to make their vintages available to a wider clientele, so now shoppers are treated to both familiar and less well-known options.

To novice dinner party hosts, the vast array of wines and flavors can make selecting a bottle or two to accompany a meal a bit more challenging. But one need not be a master sommelier to find the right pairing. The following tips can help anyone select wines to go with their menu or the type of occasion.

■ Work from light to dark. Just as you begin a dinner service with some appetizers and salad before moving to heavier courses. the wine should follow suit. Select lighter wines to accompany the earlier course before opting for deeper, richer wines as the meal

 Consider champagne to accompany appetizers and opening courses. Champagne works particularly well with salty foods, which is why it is often a good match for hors d'oeuvres. If your's is a cocktail All good things must come to an party only, you may want to exclusively serve champagne, which end, but boarding the train back will be typically pairs well with passed finger foods and even bite-sized

To make the agnolotti:

Blanch the spinach in a large pot of boiling water until bright green and tender, about 1 minute. Drain and shock under cold water. Using your hands, squeeze as much moisture as possible from the spinach, then coarsely chop. In a large mixing bowl, combine the spinach, ricotta cheese, Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese, eggs, and nutmeg. Season with salt and pepper and set aside to cool

On a lightly floured work surface, using a sharp knife or pizza cutter and ruler, trim the pasta into a 6- x 18-inch rectangle. Cut the pasta into 27 2-inch squares: First cut it horizontally into three 2-inch strips, then cut it vertically into 2-inch widths.

Spoon 1-1/2 teaspoons of the filling in a horizontal line about 1-1/4 inches long in the center of each square, leaving a border on both sides. Using a spray mister filled with water, lightly mist the pasta with water. Bring the bottom edge of each square up to match the top edge and press around the three cut edges to seal. Bring the lower (folded) edge up to the top edge and press both sides to seal forming a small horizontal pocket at the top. Using a zigzag pasta wheel, trim about 1/4 inch from both sides of each agnolotti, taking care not to cut into the filling. Set the agnolotti on a baking pan lined with parchment and dusted with a little flour and/or cornmeal. Leave in a cool, dry spot. Continue with the remaining agnolotti. (They may be frozen at this point.)

To prepare the sauce:

In a large heavy skillet, heat the olive oil over medium-high heat Add the garlic and cook, stirring, until softened and just beginning to color, about 1 minute. Stir in the mushrooms, season with salt and pepper, and cook, stirring frequently, for 1 to 2 minutes. Turn the neat to high, pour in the wine, and deglaze the pan, scraping up any brown bits with a wooden spoon; simmer until the liquid is reduced

Add the stock and rosemary sprig. Bring the liquid to a boil, then reduce the heat and simmer for 45 minutes to 1 hour, until the sauce lightly coats the back of a wooden spoon. Taste to adjust the

Meanwhile, bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Add the pasta, stir gently and cook until the agnolotti rise to the surface. then cook for 1 minute longer. Remove with a slotted spoon to a large bowl. Drain any water that accumulates in the bowl. Stir in the butter, then add the sauce and a generous amount of Parmigiano-Reggiano, toss to blend, and serve immediately on large plates.

OMG, which was selected to provide adult care after the county privatized mental health services, began informal conversations with the Frank R. Howard Foundation over a year ago, after a suggestion from the county. Handley made the announcement at the WHAT walk in Willits on Sunday, October 19.

"I'm really pleased that this seems to be coming together, because it's desperately needed and I can't think of a better use for our old hospital," wrote Handley in a Sunday email to Willits Weekly. "The timing is so perfect," Handley said Sunday evening. "They'll be moved out in June, and Ortner wants to move in in July. It would've been very expensive for us to keep this hospital vacant: we'd have to have 24hour security."

Currently, patients needing mental health care of the kind provided by such centers are sent to facilities outside the county. OMG has More of contracts with seven different facilities around the state, but only two are licensed to serve MediCal patients. Patients with Medicare or private insurance are sent to Aurora Behavioral Health in Santa Rosa or other facilities.

Tom Ortner, OMG founder and CEO, told Willits Weekly the organization plans to make a decision about which type of center to build after the first of the year. He expects services to begin in the summer or fall after approval from state licensing inspectors. OMG is planning to use patient bedrooms, the ICU and X-ray area, the nursing station, an activities room, and the kitchen on the north end of the building, and some outdoor space.

"Serendipity is really at work here, with the timing of the hospital move," explained Ortner.

OMG is experienced with such centers, and Ortner says the bulk of the costs are often from setting up facilities. However, since OMG will become an anchor tenant shortly after the building is vacated and cleaned out by Adventist Health, he expects these expenses to be minimal. Funding the center will come from OMG's budget.

As of now, Ortner says nine out of 10 individuals in mental health crisis picked up by law enforcement are brought to a local ER for evaluation before being taken to other facilities, such as the Ukiah and Ft. Bragg access centers.

Ortner anticipates costs per day for such patients would be halved study the water we have, the levels, the recharge by the creation of a crisis center in the county.

Willits Police Chief Gonzalez explained that right now law enforcement often serves as the front line of contact with patients requiring mental health services. If individuals are determined to have not broken the law, Willits officers bring them to Howard Hospital, where they are met by an access center representative or undergo further evaluation.

"We have to do our own triage," said Gonzalez, as the city often only has two officers on the street. "Locking people up is not a good thing. However, if the individual hasn't caused a threat to public safety or given us reason to detain them, there's only so much we can do to first year in office to improve the situation? help." Gonzalez says finding adequate bed space for mental health patients without private insurance remains an ongoing problem.

individuals picked up from county areas go through a similar process certainly are and are taken to UVMC Hospital in Ukiah.

Both types of center being considered would have a maximum of 16 beds, as required for MediCal reimbursement. Both would serve patients who are Mendocino County residents and eligible to participate in the county's mental health services; those with private insurance will not be eligible.

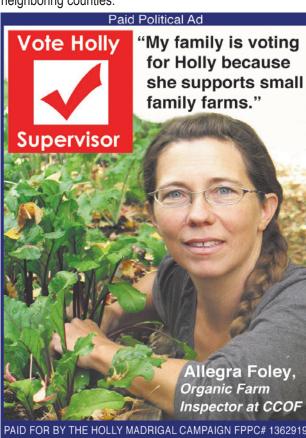

Ortner delineated the several differences between a licensed crisis residential center and a mental health rehabilitation center. Crisis residential centers are unlocked, voluntary stay places that "represent a safe place for people in crisis on a short-term basis," with 24 hour supervision, care, and security. Patients are eligible if they are determined to not meet the threshold for what's known as a "5150," shorthand for the California law which allows for a qualified clinician to place an involuntary psychiatric hold on a patient considered a "danger to self and/or others."

Crisis residential centers can take patients from stays of a single day up to 30 days; Ortner says the typical stay is from one to two with the Downtown Specific Plan for a number weeks. Right now OMG has three such Mendocino County patients housed out of state.

By contrast, mental health rehabilitation centers house patients with the same type of eligibility, but with more extreme clinical diagnoses or behavioral problems requiring long-term care. Patients are primarily in judge-approved conservatorships and facilities are locked. These centers provide longer stays, often between three to six months, although there are no maximum length requirements. Ortner noted: "There have been people in the county in the past that have stayed in such facilities for years." Right now OMG has nine Mendocino county patients in similar centers out of county; there have been up to 16 in OMG plans to consider the volume of in-county patients requiring each type of center, when deciding which kind to open. "If we had our choice we'd do both," said Ortner, but licensing laws would require separate buildings, and there is only one facility available.

Typically, a center of either kind requires at least 75 percent of the beds full to remain financially viable. If more beds remain empty, OMG might need to consider entering contracts to take patients from neighboring counties.

interested in moving forward on, because there's lots of areas where we could be incentivizing building practices that encourage water conservation, a lot also am very supportive of Congressman Huffman's work on something called the Forecast Act, which would provide better management of Woodhouse: It's inaccurate to say Willits has been a leader in dealing with water problems. Really, the staff has done quite a bit, and now that the drought has hit, we are trying our best to catch up. We have made some moves. But we also have made a tremendous number of expensive mistakes and are not doing a good job.

could be done in the county building department for

There's a state law the governor signed that gives us a rare opportunity to study our aguifers, and if we're smart enough the board of supervisors will be in charge of this. They will put together the water agency, and the [water] districts we have; they will rates, and that will give us the information we need to make an intelligent water policy, starting with the

So it's a real test of the board of supervisors to see if they will stand up. I intend to stand up and lead that. Because water's been a problem over at least the last 10 or 20 years. We haven't been able to grow because we don't have water.

Question: What are the most serious issues facing the Third District, and what will you do during your Woodhouse: Public safety in Covelo and Laytonville and outlying areas. We're not really aware Commander Captain Timothy Pearce from the Sheriff's Office says of how dangerous and unprotected they are, but they

> When I go door to door, these nice, older women have rifles and pistols laying around the living room, because they actually have to defend themselves, and the sheriff has said we will not be there for a few hours. The resident deputy in Covelo gets paid $5,000 a year extra, and he will be leaving. Once again, we'll be without that officer, and that's a crucial

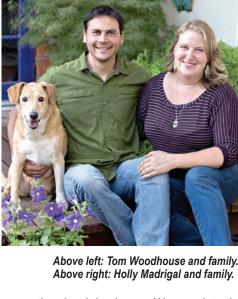

Also, water planning and the Brooktrails wildfire danger are huge. The potential second access [to Brooktrails] is a number of years away. Planning for it is important, and informing those people about wildfire dangers is one of my focuses as I go door to door. When you talk to those people up there, that's one of their most important issues.

Been working on Willits after the bypass, working of years. The plug was pulled on that by the [city] council. Now we're back on: once again, late in reaction to a real problem.

When the bypass comes, we're going to need to have some kind of attractive downtown, and we're working on that right now.

The rebuilding of our failing infrastructure, roads and bridges, are the problems we must face. We'll need to have job growth to answer many of these problems, because they all involve running a healthy economy. I have the skills we'll need to move this

Madrigal: One of the key issues facing Mendocino County is economic development. Revenues have been pretty much flat for the past few years, and the existing board of supervisors has done really a lot of cutting. They've cut the budget down to the bone and have gotten it to an even keel, but the revenue side is really where we need to be looking. We need to be supporting local business. We need to be encouraging business development in the county.

Here in the city council, I actually took the lead with that last year, when I came up with the Mayor's Initiative to work on encouraging local manufacturing. We have a lot of very smart people here. We have entrepreneurs in our area, but many of them get caught up in the regulatory system. So we came up with a group of volunteers, and we came up with a spreadsheet that would list available manufacturing properties in the Willits area, including who the relevant contact information is, and whether or not the property was developable, whether or not it was in a flood plain, and other factors that a business owner would need to do to move forward. That, and having a staff that is professional and competent and friendly, is how we have become more businessfriendly in Willits.

Question: What can you and the board of supervisors do to improve the current policies that cover county employees? Do you recognize there are problems?

Madrigal: The morale of the county is very low at this point, and that is an issue that needs to be addressed.

One of the things that has become apparent to me over the past couple of years is a separation between the staff and the CEO's office. The CEO's office has continued to have a lot of control over the policies of the board, and I think the relationship between the board and county employees has been eroded over time because of this. Especially in dealing with the recession, when all the employees got a 10 percent

Many employees left the county, or were let go, and the people who were left – a lot of people are doing three people's jobs in one. So, they're exhausted, they're somewhat demoralized, and I really think we need to rebuild that bridge. We need to rebuild the trust. And that can only really be done with action. It can't just be words. It can't just be platitudes.

Employees were requesting a 3 percent restoration. They don't see it as a raise, because they took a 10 percent cut. They see it as a restoration back towards where they were. I am absolutely willing to explore

We also have to deal with the employee turnover rate. We have an incredibly aggressive turnover rate, and we need to figure out how to keep employees we are investing in here in Mendocino County.

Woodhouse: A lot of hard work was done, and there were about 1,500 county employees. Then the downturn hit, and through attrition and not brilliant planning, we got rid of about one-third of those

It wasn't thought-out, how that would affect the little groups that work together. It was just whoever had other opportunities, whoever could retire, whoever just couldn't take it any more, just fled. And what's left is a very confused, demoralized group of people. We

It's going to take a lot to rebuild and reorganize. So far, that's not the will of the supervisors. They're distancing themselves from – they don't deal directly with employees. They paid $250,000 for somebody to come in and do the contract.

The first thing I would do is place $250,000 on the table and say: "We know we can give you this much money. I'm here to negotiate. Let's see what else we can do together.'

How To Sudoku:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a Sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve and Fort Bragg schedules in line with most of the county's library locations. They will take effect December 8.

"It will give us an opportunity to do some things we'd like to do beyond just running the desk, like more events," said Shirako.

In recent times, the library has struggled to schedule adequate staffing to ensure safety requirements, and provide weekends and personal leave to employees. The Willits branch recently lost one part-time staff member who worked 8 hours a week, though it is in the process of hiring a new library assistant, who will work 20 hours a week.

The Fort Bragg branch has experienced similar issues.

The survey, which ended in July, collected input from the public on proposed schedule changes. Responses were collected via paper surveys given to patrons, by phone, and through the Friends of the Willits Library Facebook page. Shirako said the response was 69 percent in favor and 10 percent opposed. Another 21 percent had no

Willits-area library patrons mirrored typical library usage data nationally.

The passage of 2011's Measure A, in which voters overwhelming supported a sales tax to fund Mendocino County public libraries, resulted in the Willits branch expanding operations to five days a week. In previous years, due to financial restraints, Willits and Ukiah libraries alternated which days they were open to provide weeklong coverage for the county.

The decision to remain closed on Fridays was likely a holdover from that period, Shirako said.

Interim County Librarian Wally Clark filed the scheduling change request with supervisors, and it was approved

There is a 30-day notification period that occurs before the changes can be enacted; the new schedules will start Monday, December 8. This means the Willits branch will be closed that day, but reopen Tuesday from 10 am to 8

Currently, the Willits Library is open Monday from 10 am to 6 pm. Tuesday and Wednesday from 10 am to 8pm. Thursday from 10 am to 5 pm, and Saturday from 10 am to 5 pm. The new hours of operation for Willits will be Tuesday and Wednesday from 10 am to 8 pm, Thursday from 10 am to 6 pm, and Friday and Saturday from 10 am

County branches that will remain open on either Sunday or Monday are Ukiah (Sunday 1-5 pm) and Point Arena (Monday noon-6 pm).

The Willits library is located at 390 East Commercial Street. Phone: 459-6908.

weapon other than a firearm.

The drama began at 12:35 pm on October 13 after Mendocino County Sheriff's deputies responded to a reported burglary in the 23000 block of Reynolds Highway.

The homeowner had arrived at the residence to see a large U-Haul with two men inside parked in front of his residence. the MCSO report said.

The homeowner realized the residence had just been burglarized and several items had been stolen. The homeowner attempted to locate the U-Haul, but was unsuccessful.

As deputies left the Reynolds Highway home, another burglary was reported in the 5300 block of Wild Iris Lane in the Pine Mountain area.

What happened next is similar to the account of events at Reynolds Highway: Deputies arrived and spoke with the homeowner, who said he arrived home to see a large U-Haul parked in his driveway.

The Pine Mountain homeowner told deputies he spoke with two male adults, who matched the physical description of the suspects in the Reynolds Highway burglary earlier in the day.

The men said they were looking for an address, and then drove off in the U-Haul before the homeowner entered his noted, will increase employee contributions by approximately $540,000 and carry a price tag of approximately $4.1 million for the county.

Once inside, the second homeowner discovered several items had been moved around but nothing appeared to be missing.

The Actuarial Experience Study is required every three years by the County Employees Retirement Law of 1937; study results determine contributions to the retirement plan made by employees and the investing in broad sectors of the market.

Various assumptions play into the required contribution amount, but the assumption of most interest to both trustees and the public – dubbed "the elephant in the room" by Stephens - was the investment rate of return, due to turmoil in the financial markets over the last couple of weeks and dire forecasts by a number of investment consultants.

Mendocino County also has a painful history of not contributing sufficient amounts to the retirement plan, in part due to overly optimistic investment return estimates.

So-called unfunded actuarial accrued liabilities must be paid by the county, not employees, requiring Mendocino County to go into debt by issuing bonds in 1996 and 2002 to provide a required $106 million to the retirement plan

That reduction was not enough for Stephens, who pointed to much lower investment return expectations by Callan Associates, the firm that advises MCERA on its investments. Stephens also quoted work done by the Stanford Institute for Economic Policy Research and a recent report by the Blue Ribbon Panel on Public Pension Plan Funding commissioned by research organization Society of Actuaries.

Both studies found that for far too long, pension boards, with the blessings of actuaries, have used overly ambitious assumptions about future investment returns. Resulting insufficient pension plan funding leaves future generations to pay for benefits that should have been funded

The practice leads to retirement systems taking greater investment risks to try to make up the shortfalls, without disclosing the gambles to the public.

Stephens' comments resulted in a lengthy exchange with the consultants, who rejected the studies as market-driven, shortterm thinking, and the studies preparers, as well as Callan Associates, as professionally

As the deputy left his car, the U-Haul began driving towards him, the press release said. He had to jump out of way to avoid being struck as the U-Haul sped

In the meantime, a second deputy approached in a patrol vehicle and stopped the U-Haul.

The driver refused to get out of the vehicle and the deputy deployed his Taser for safety reasons The U-Haul sped off again, and deputies pursued the van along Baechtel Road to Holly Street and then southbound on

The U-Haul later stopped near the end of Locust Street, where both occupants fled unqualified to prepare the required actuarial study of future investment returns.

The exchange then shifted to a discussion among trustees Timothy Knudsen, John Sakowicz and Stephens about whether MCERA's current investment management strategy is actively searching the investment market for "good deals" or passively

Knudsen asserted the strategy for 80 percent of the investments is "active," which surprised the Segal Consulting actuaries, who said the county had never told them their strategy was so active.

However, the Segal report noted the estimated rate of return of a retirement fund, net of investment expenses, should not be different under an active or passive investment management strategy.

Stephens also had to remind the actuaries a change in expected returns shifts the current level of contributions between employees and the county, not merely the level of contributions between current versus future taxpayers.

Stephens said he was uncomfortable with the retirement plan's funding shortfall and wants to find ways to increase contributions.

Six members of the public weighed in on the debate, all worried about pension funding shortfalls and whether county contributions to the plan and the debt load to make those contributions could bankrupt Mendocino County.

When it came to the discussion of whether to vote on the actuaries' recommendations immediately, or give the county time to study the matter, Supervisor John McCowen assured trustees the board of supervisors is braced for a reduction in the estimated rate of return because "the trend has been clear for several years."

Sakowicz recommendations represent a balanced approach based on affordability, to which Stephens responded the trustees' responsibility is "not based on affordability."

Ultimately, trustees accepted the actuaries' recommendations, with Stephens as the lone "no" vote due to concerns of an unreasonably high recommended future rate of return.

A vote on phasing in the increased contributions over two or even three years could be considered at a future meeting, if requested by supervisors.

local railroad line. For periods during what Stogner termed the railroad's "long and sort of sordid history." Willits enjoyed a significant place in the railroad's development. By 1903, Southern-

Pacific-owned standard-gauge tracks extended from the Bay Area, along the Russian

River, through Willits to Sherwood. The line was called the "San Francisco to Eureka Railroad", although the first track to Eureka wasn't completed until 1914. The idea of a North Coast railroad connecting redwood timber and scenic views with the southern metropolitan cities had long been an attractive idea for speculators. Constructing a track north of Sherwood, however, required mapping a route through the Eel River canyon on difficult and unstable terrain. It was not until 1907 that Southern Pacific merged

Eureka, completed in 1914. The first section, 13 miles north to Longvale, was finished in 1911, the same year as the railroad to the coast was completed with the Santa Fe and other rail companies to and began work on a single-track line to

"What makes it all so miraculous is that they were able to get a train through that canyon, and they ran trains for so many years," says Stogner

"North of Willits is a whole different ballgame," he noted. The rails follow Outlet Creek to the main stem of the Eel, and then cross 100 miles of seismically active area Stogner describes as "full of shifting lands and landslides – though I heard the view was

One such landslide delayed the arrival of the inaugural passenger train in Eureka from the location of the final "Golden Spike" ceremony at Cain Rock near Alderpoint on October

After more than half a century of trains running the full line, operations north of Willits stopped in 1995; the last freight train ran south in 1998, after which the tracks were closed due lack of financial viability.

NCRA, which owns the line above Cloverdale and an exclusive freight easement to the south, was created by the state in 1984. NCRA has run freight trains since 2011 from Windsor to Novato via what's called the "Brazos Junction", to connect with the national

The NCRA also owns the rights to passenger excursion trains north of Cloverdale to

"Our mission in life is to restore freight trains north of Windsor, eventually to Willits,"

NCRA restored service to Windsor in 2011. That cost "roughly a million a mile," Stogner

The stretch of track from Airport Road in Santa Rosa to Marin is now being upgraded with concrete ties to create SMART's high-speed passenger commuter rail, scheduled to open in 2016.

The current Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company, which leases the tracks from NCRA and SMART to run short-haul freight, is using the southern section of line while planning to continue restoration north to Cloverdale and beyond at an estimated cost $10 to $15 million. Rail restoration will enable freight travel from 25 to 40 mph.

Stogner adds the last time the Mendocino County tracks have been evaluated was in a 2005 capital assessment report. NCRA also hopes to restore tracks in the Humboldt Bay area to freight use, but connecting the two, Stogner says, is "not foreseeable." A September court ruling favorable to the NCRA in a lawsuit filed by Friends of the Eel River was good news for the railroad agency, Stogner says, and potentially good news for freight traffic everywhere. A centennial celebration for the Northwest Pacific Railroad will be held this Saturday October 25, in Petaluma.

dunk affair, in spite of a unanimous vote by the Brooktrails board.

"There was a lot of discussion about it," Ramming said. "I would say that it took longer than some of the board members would have liked.'

Ramming added that part of the reason the meeting took longer was because Brooktrails wanted to ensure the wording of the two resolutions the board passed made it clear Brooktrails was approving the connections only, not the project.

Approval of the project is the responsibility of the City of Willits, which owns Ells Field and has been negotiating with REACH.

Contacted a few days after the meeting. Willits City Manager Adrienne Moore said that she was pleased with the outcome. "Overall, I'm pleased that we received approval for the connections we were seeking," she said. She said she'd also assured the Brooktrails board that the city was looking into the possibility that further study, including possibly a full CEQA review, might be necessary before the city could legally approve the project.

"I assured the Brooktrails board that the city is trying to ascertain what is required. and that we will respond appropriately," she raising your kids or keeping your marriage. You have to have the courage to face your biggest problems, and that means dealing with our valuable county employees.

Question: What can the board of supervisors do to improve employment within Mendocino County? What will you do during your first year in office if elected?

Woodhouse: The board of supervisors does not create jobs. For all of the talk and agreement and the desire for jobs, our county has consistently lost jobs over the last 30 years.

Something's not working here. There are very few opportunities for young people and new county residents, and the first thing I would do is retain the jobs we already have. Which means not outsourcing more things like mental health

It's not a logical thing to do, to get rid of your trained county staff, thinking you're going to save money, letting somebody else handle it and not being responsible for the results.

We'll have to pay that money anyway if we don't meet the requirements. It's an illusion. It doesn't make any sense.

If we want local jobs we have to retain the ones we have. We need to get government out of the way of entrepreneurs. We have so many requirements. This is the hottest issue in every election for supervisor. Nothing changes. [Government keeps saying] there needs to be more and more control and negative energy put out to keep people from trying to do something.

Saying we want it is just the first step. We need to change it. I intend to make a difference in this. In the Planning and Building Department, and the attitude of the supervisors, in saying we really do need to have jobs or we're not going to have anything.

Madrigal: I am going to disagree on this. I think this is why I'm an optimist.

I see things happening around Mendocino County that are improving the job network. Just one example of that is Factory Pipe down in Ukiah. They make mufflers for four-wheelers and those sorts of things. And they have more business than they know what to do with.

They are running a tight shop and providing jobs. They have a challenge finding qualified local employees willing to do that work, but those jobs do exist and we can do more to support that.

I've already talked about the red tape at the county, and that's something we can streamline. Because frankly, people can get different answers to the same question depending on who you talk to, and we need to make sure we are helping that situation, not making it worse.

I'm a big supporter of local agriculture – Future Farmers of America and vocational programs in the schools. It is absolutely essential to make sure those kids have skills when they graduate so they can join the workforce. Because we do have a lot of really smart people here.

As soon as I get into office, I'm interested in commissioning a study on the economic impacts of legalizing marijuana. We know marijuana has a huge impact on the local economy, and in order to make smart policy decisions I need actual data, not anecdotal information. An economic analysis would be very helpful to enable us figure out how the county is going to prepare for that potential economic impact.

Question: Can you define public banking, and would you support it if you are elected to the board of supervisors?

Woodhouse: Public banking is a great idea, and I would support it. We have some great locally owned banks here already, and we do have access to money for projects. But we don't have the projects to move forward. Yes, I am a supporter of public banking if it's properly organized.

Madrigal: A good resource for this is the Bank of North Dakota. If you go online you can find out more information. I am definitely supportive of public banking if we can figure out a way Mendocino County gets to retain more of our investment dollars, and it benefits us and avoids the drastic fluctuations of the traditional banking system.

Question: You both have spoken about what's not working in local government. How have you arrived at your viewpoints and have you engaged in feedback from the personnel that provide the services you are criticizing?

Madrigal: I've been doing a great deal of communication with county employees, and I do have some strong views on regulations for building permits, things like that. I have also had the experience of going into the county and asking for a reassessment of my taxes. You know, I'm also a citizen. I've had really positive experiences in working with our county and having somebody be responsive. I am going to continue to have that open door policy of communication.

Woodhouse: Absolutely. That's where I see so clearly that local government is not working. It's not working for the employees, and it's not working for the public.

It's hard to change it without a deep commitment from the public to get involved. I've been going to meetings for years and years, and the public isn't here. The public needs to get involved. That's the missing ingredient to make the public government work better.

Don't forget to go and vote! Tuesday, November 4, 2014

Once in a lifetime walk

I'm still flush from the walking exercise and excitement of the morning spent with those good folks who sponsored the wonderful "Walk for Wellness and Health," last weekend.

The morning began with an early 9:15 am registration, a registration that included signing in, a free raffle ticket, and a blank flag. A blank flag? Hmmmm? Brain-child of Carlin Diamond: she explained you could write anything you liked on them but they were meant to carry a message from the old Howard Hospital to the new Howard Hospital and would be planted on a nearby hilltop.

Official greeters at Howard Hospital were Frank R. Howard Foundation President Margie Handley and former hospital administrator and Howard Foundation board member Jann Lamprich.

We all had a few laughs when Margie provided a list of fees from hospital archives. One of them was $5 for an X-ray, and you could just stop by if you wanted to get your teeth X-rayed. By way of introduction, Margie noted that Jann had started working at the hospital when she was just 16 and still attending high school.

of the hospital. She was presenting a brief overview of the hospital's history, when the sound system started to give Keith Johnson absolute fits with its spits and sputtering. Diane Smalley suggested we all gather around Jann to hear the rest

As Jann continued, it became clear there's a special place in her heart for Dr. Babcock, who was guite a character, agreeing many times to barter or forgive debts owed by patients because he knew the family and their circumstances. Someone once told her that they knew when Dr. Babcock arrived at the hospital because of the laughter he created en

Library, I think we could have listened to Jann's stories the rest of the morning, but she concluded her presentation - and I would swear her eyes glistened a little when she said the code of the hospital was always "neighbors helping neighbors," and she would not be able to bring herself to attend its closing ceremony. Thank you, Jann, you provided a very moving tribute.

Before leaving, someone asked for a show of hands of "anyone born in this hospital." Stepping forward to have their picture taken together were Nancy Stipe, Don McNeal, John Wagenet, and Lorelei Choate - Jann's daughter!

Included during our return trip to Haehl Creek was a delightful segue through the lovely natural setting that is Haehl Creek Trail. A delicious, hearty vegetable-quinoa chili and cornbread lunch was ready and waiting courtesy of Chef Kyle at the hospital. In between feeding his little kids. Hospital CEO Rick Bockmann provided a brief overview of the new hospital; Ananda Johnson, proud as punch, talked about the gardens; and Alan Falleri spoke about Haehl Creek Trail and the community spirit that was the driving force in its

17th Willits Walk for Wellness breaks new ground

Our first 16 Willits Walks for Wellness and Health followed a specific 10,000 step route through Willits which starts downtown and takes people through the neighborhoods and connects with the schools. When we started the walks seven years ago, we were responding to two simple questions that I heard at a health conference:

"When you were growing up, how many of you walked or rode your bikes to school?" Most everyone in the audience raised their hands. The second question was telling. "How many of your children or grandchildren now walk or ride their bikes to school?" Almost no one raised their hands.

We all know the result of inactivity and "fast-food" diets. We don't live as well. We formed the Willits Healthy Action Team to get our kids and our community moving again.

With the new hospital and planned Wellness Center moving towards reality, we decided to change the venue to the site of the new hospital and the Howard Foundation Medical Campus.

It's time we expanded our concept of wellness to include a complete continuum of care. We need to stay healthy and do everything we can to prevent illness. That's where the new Wellness Center comes in. When asked "what all will be included in the Wellness Center?," Wellness Program Director Doreen Blumenfeld told the group, "That depends on what the community wants. This will be your Wellness Center, and we want your inputs." We also need a state-ofthe-art hospital to take care of the inevitable medical needs that we will all face some time in our lives.

The new Wellness Center is being created under the auspices of the Howard Memorial Hospital Foundation in support of the foundation's purpose to ensure "Quality Care Close to Home." We are doubly blessed to have the Frank R. Howard Foundation and the Frank R. Howard Memorial Hospital working together to ensure the health and wellness of all the people in our community.

Gail Richards has offered a heartfelt description of the walk. I'd like to share a little of the "behind the scenes" support that makes these walks possible. My wife, Carlin Diamond, has helped register people for every one of the walks, and her smiling face and guidance always make people feel they have come to the right place to have a fun and engaging walk through our town.

Holly Madrigal has walked in all 17 walks and is a great role model of health for our whole community. If she isn't walking, she's riding her cool bike.

Freddie Long keeps track of our registrations and sends out reminders about each walk as they are planned. Ananda Johnson creates the wonderful posters that promote the walks. There are many on the "Action Team" who help bring you the walks twice a year. If you'd like to join us, give me a call: 459-5505.

This walk wouldn't have happened without the planning and presence of Ananda and her husband, Keith, Diane Smalley, Margie Handley, Doreen Blumenfeld, Mike Aplet, Alan Falleri, Keith Baker, Lisa Mace, and Tim Rice. And of course, all the people who came out and walked.

I was very moved by Jann Lamprich's memories of Dr. Raymond Babcock whose spirit of "help the patients first, focus on the money later" guided the early days of the hospital. Howard Memorial Hospital CEO Rick Bockmann assured us that the historic focus of putting people first will live on in the new hospital. Our next big walk will be in May. Hope you'll join us.

Warren Moore

The Harvest Moon Hometown Celebration was the perfect setting for fall-time photos, and the idea was hatched to set up a photo booth in front of J.D. Redhouse as a fundraising opportunity for the Willits Elementary Charter School. WECS mom and J. D. Redhouse owner Ashtan Bloomquist approached local photographress Maureen Moore with the idea, and the plan was set.

Homegrown pumpkins brought by Kim Shuster and family adorned some of the bales, as did student-made scarecrows: one a lady, the other a gentleman, both standing some 10-plus feet tall. Shuster and several WECS students helped at the booth during the event, and the digital image download option was a hit with families who sat for their portraits. Funds raised were split with WECS, earning the school $125.

"WECS students had a wonderful time at the Harvest Moon Hometown Celebration," noted WECS Principal Kara McClellan. "A special thank you goes to Maureen Moore! She had a lovely photo booth (with some help from WECS scarecrow-making second graders and the WECS student council). She generously donated half of her proceeds to benefit the WECS field trip fund."

Fundraising committee chair Aura de la Fuente noted, "We were so excited to partner with such a talented local photographer!"

"Holly has taken the time to learn the issues important to the north county. By engaging people, she is actively seeking solutions. Leadership is about results which is why I support Holly."
- Art Harwood, Harwood Lumber

"We believe Madrigal has gathered the experience and shown the leadership needed to be an effective supervisor. We like Madrigal's proactive measure to increase manufacturing jobs in the City of Willits with the Mayor's Initiative. Madrigal is uniquely forward thinking."

> Book party celebrates 40 years of California publishing

On Sunday, October 26, from 2:30 to 5 pm, a free book talk and cultural conversation will take place at the Mendocino County Museum to mark the publication of Willits author Kim Bancroft's new book, "The Heyday of Malcolm Margolin: The Damn Good Times of a Fiercely Independent Publisher." The book commemorates the 40th anniversary of the founding of Heyday Books, a unique independent press that has become an instrumental sounding board for the diverse cultures present in the state, with a focus on its Native Present at the conversation

will be author Kim Bancroft; Heyday Books founder and overall raconteur Malcolm Margolin; Lindsie Bear, director of the Berkeley Roundhouse and editor of "News From Native California"; Priscilla Hunter, representative of the Coyote Valley Band

Verle Anderson, of the Native American History Project; and Dr. of Pomo Indians; Victoria Patterson, curator of the museum's just-opened exhibit on local Native peoples, "Woven Worlds." The panel discussion will be followed by a book signing.

"The Heyday of Malcolm Margolin" is at once a portrait of an exceptional person and of the press he founded in 1974 and fostered against all odds. Woven into the story of Margolin's life are testimonies and reflections from the many people who have published with, worked for, or been affected by Malcolm Margolin and Heyday Books. The book thus becomes a gathering place of its own, providing a proving ground for Margolin's adage: "I love being warmed by other people's fires."

The Mendocino County Museum is located at 400 East Commercial St. in Willits. The Museum is open Wednesday through Sunday from 10 am to 4:30 pm. For more information please call 459-2736 or visit www.MendocinoMuseum.org.

Amazing Athletes

of Willits High School

Soccer | Alexis Johnson, 16, Junior

Breakfast of Champions: Honey Nut Cheerios. Position: Stopper.

Love for the Sport: Everything! 3 years on the field.

Captain Alexis scored the first goal of the season against Tomales and the latest goal against Cloverdale. She has recently been moved to stopper, where she has made her presence known. According to coach Melissa Johnson: "AJ has a power boot that even her brother (the boys goalie) doesn't want to be on the receiving end of."

Cross Country | Ricardo Haschak, 15, Freshman

Breakfast of Champions: Guatemalan food including bean breakfast burritos.

Position: Varsity member.

Love for the Sport: I love the feeling of wind in my face when I run. My favorite track is our home course in Brooktrails, the Par Course.

Ricardo was the Varsity Boys #2 finisher in last week's win over St. Helena. He has placed in the top three all season and is playing a huge part in the team's undefeated record.

'Secrets of Backyard Bird Photography'

Chris Hansen signs his new book at Willits Library

When local wildlife photographer Chris Hansen realized he wanted to create an instructional book based on his backyard bird photo experience, all the pieces just fell together. Hansen had spent years perfecting his techniques, building a photo blog, and thinking about how best to use new digital equipment when he had the idea: "This blog might make a good book!"

Kate Maxwell willitsweekly@gmail.com

He completed writing the book in two weeks, and eight months later, the finished version of Hansen's "Secrets of Backyard Bird Photography" is available for both bird lovers and photography enthusiasts in print and as an e-book from publishers Rocky Nook, Inc.

Hansen's book serves as a manual. It covers topics ranging from cameras and other equipment, attracting birds, using blinds and creating controlled settings, tips on showing work, and recommended suppliers. It also features an extensive section on DIY (Do It Yourself) projects, such as special blinds, backdrops, water features, and feeders that Hansen has developed over the years.

The book is full of examples of Hansen's beautiful photographs and is intended as a "Bible" for backyard bird photographers. There is even a chapter on photographing hummingbirds, which Hansen describes as "very, very

"To me, it's an example of how much talent is right here in our community, and how we can all have a dream like this come true," said Steve Hellman, Mendocino College English instructor and Hansen's editor, at an October 15 book presentation at the Willits Library.

Hellman and Hansen were connected by Skip Beale, also a Mendocino College instructor, and worked together to edit the book before sending it off to publishers. The

Beyond being a "step-by-step comprehensive guide," "Secrets of Backyard Bird Photography" is also a welldesigned showcase for Hansen's photographs. "It was really hard to narrow it down," he said, while showing several photos he said he'll "save for the next book."

Hansen has always loved birds and the outdoors and received his first camera at 16, though he says he didn't get really serious about photography until one of his photographs was selected for the cover of California Hunter magazine when he was in his twenties. Since then, Hansen has taken thousands of photographs, and his work has been included in magazines, newspapers, calendars, websites, videos, and in the book "Best of North American Hunter."

At the presentation, Hansen gave a slideshow demonstrating a variety of his techniques, as well as giving a glimpse of the range of his photographic work. The audience gasped at some of the shots Hansen had captured: from his backyard, around the Little Lake Valley, and in other wildlife areas around the region.

Hansen explained while he considers himself a photography generalist, backyard bird photography has a special place in his heart, although he shared some stunning shots of other wildlife photos with the crowd.

his living room, and uses easily available materials such as perches made from branches, modified peanut butter jar feeders, wellplaced blinds, and creative

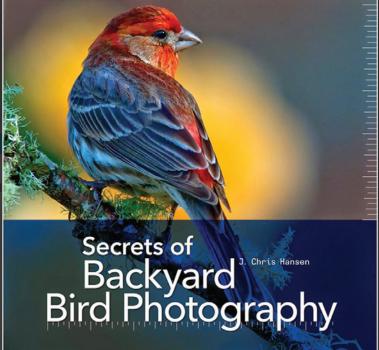

His emphasis on using inexpensive and modifiable materials means that the techniques are accessible and cheap for the beginner, but also present new possibilities for the more experienced backyard photographer, and many audience members went home with new ideas to try out.

Hansen's book is available in print or e-book through Rocky Nook, Inc. and online at Amazon. He has donated copies to Willits High, and Baechtel Grove Middle School (where Hansen used to teach), and a copy is also available at the Willits Library. More of his work can be found at www. christhephotog.blogspot.com and earlier work at www. diyphotocheapodepot.blogspot.com, which focuses on DIY

For those interested in further instruction, Hansen will be the lead instructor for a "Photography Basics and Beyond Cruise" happening in February 2015 with Celtic Heritage Destinations and Carnival Cruise Tours. The cruise will travel to Catalina, California, and Ensenada, Mexico and "will include hands-on and classroom instruction, group excursions, and photography assignments geared to help vou discover the basics of focus, exposure, ISO, and shutter

Participants with any kind of camera (or camera phone) Hansen used his backyard bird photos to illustrate some and all skill levels are welcome to join in. Please contact
